BID TO BREAK RED ARMY IN UKRAINE

BLACK SEA PORT EVACUATED

THE Moscow communiqué to-day announces the evacuation of Nikolaiev, the Southern Ukraine grain port, and Krivoirog, which is in the iron ore district. The Germans yesterday claimed the capture of Nikolaiev. The Russians said that the dockyard there was blown up before the evacuation.

The Moscow communiqué added that Soviet troops continue fierce fighting along the entire front, and said that in the Black Sea submarines sank two large Rumanian transports.

Moscow yesterday announced for the third successive day that fighting continued all along the Murmansk-Black Sea front against the German bid to break the Red Army before winter.

The war against Russia has entered on its third month.

DRIVE TOWARDS ODESSA

According to a Berlin military spokesman Nikolaiev fell after stubborn fighting, and fighting continues for Odessa.

The German High Command makes no other specific claim, but a German radio report asserts that the town of Nikopol, 125 miles from the mouth of the Dnieper, has been occupied.

As the war swings into its third month, the Soviet armies, admirably supported by the Red Air Force, is hitting back at the Germans on all sectors, sapping the strength of the German third great offensive, says the Press Association. In the south, where Herr Hitler's desperate anxiety for quick victories is indicated by reports that he has taken personal command in the war's biggest push for the industrial prizes of the Ukraine, Marshal Budyenny has frustrated frenzied German efforts to encircle his forces.

"FAIRLY CHEERFUL"

News from Moscow reaching authoritative quarters in London over the week-end presented a "fairly cheerful" picture. Fighting in the Ukraine remained somewhat confused, but it was stated everywhere that the situation was under control—a clear indication that the Red Army Command had foiled the attempt to surround and destroy their main forces on this front.

Soviet troops are believed to be continuing their successful withdrawal to a new strong line of defence behind the natural barrier of the wide, fast-flowing Dnieper. West of Kiev there has been a very heavy German attack on a narrow front, and it is said the German forces were decimated.

In the Smolensk area, apparently abandoning hope of any immediate further progress towards Moscow, the Germans are digging in everywhere, and in the marshy Kholm area further north heavy onslaughts have been beaten back by the Soviet troops.

According to Berlin, the Soviet forces in the Ukraine are withdrawing eastwards towards the Dnieper bend—with the Germans in "unceasing pursuit." In this area is the iron ore centre of Krivoirog, and last night the German News Agency said that "mopping up" round there was "completed" yesterday. The capture of only 7,000 prisoners and 38 guns was claimed.

REARGUARD ACTIONS

Marshal Budyenny—using classic Russian strategy—is making an orderly withdrawal, and strong rearguards are evidently holding up the German advance, says the Press Association.

North of Leningrad the Finns claim the taking of Sortavala, on the northern tip of Lake Ladoga, and the Russians are said to be completely deprived of this side of the lake. Reports reaching Stockholm say the Finns are only ten miles from Kexholm, on Lake Ladoga's western shore.

A Hungarian communiqué claims a "successful battle of annihilation" against "encircled" formations in the Ukraine, but no specification of the number of troops thus cut off is given.

A small group of fighter 'planes which attempted to raid Moscow on Saturday night were dispersed before reaching the city.

In New York yesterday, two military experts commented on the present stage of the war. Major Fielding Elliot—in the New York Times—suggested that the front is nearing stabilisation, with a resultant defeat for Hitler. Max Werner—in the New Republic—stated that there is no question that the Soviet High Command "has the will and the plan for an offensive. It has unquestionably numerical superiority in tanks and infantry, and has rallied great reserves for use in a great decisive counter-offensive." "The Anglo-Saxon Powers," he adds "have it within their power to achieve a quick victory in collaboration with the Soviet Union."

General Antonescu, the Rumanian Commander-in-Chief, has just arrived the German-Rumanian front lines near Odessa, says a Bucharest despatch to Rome.

SLOWING DOWN?

Alexander Werth, Reuter's Special Correspondent in Moscow, said last night that the big German thrust in the Ukraine appears to be slowing down in the face of fierce Russian resistance. That was the impression in Moscow, despite the absence of precise information from the front. It was possible, he said, that the Dnieper bend would become another Smolensk, where the Germans have now been held up for weeks.

Territory so far abandoned by the Russians does not appear to be vital, the correspondent went on. An indication that the fighting has lost some of its rigour is afforded by the relatively small Russian figures for both Soviet and German air losses. The Germans yesterday claimed 50 Russian 'planes shot down, 13 of them in the Ukraine. During the fiercest moments of the Smolensk battle these ran into many dozens daily.

Although the Germans are now in possession of Smolensk its defence cost them Verdun-like losses, and struck a moral blow of the greatest importance by demonstrating the blitzkrieg's failure, adds Werth.

AT SMOLENSK

Numerous German tank divisions and infantry divisions were totally or partly wiped out in the fierce 30-day battle, in which the town of Smolensk changed hands several times, says Lieutenant-General Yeremenky, in Red Star yesterday.

"Thousands of German tanks, after triumphal marches across Western Europe and the Balkan States," he says, "have as a result of the Smolensk battle been burned or knocked out by artillery or blown up. This has severely weakened the spirit of the German infantry, which greatly prefers to advance under cover of armoured units. Without such support German infantry does not show any great courage or initiative. That has been our constant experience. The Germans broke into Smolensk many times only to be completely wiped out by Russian troops defending every street and every house."

A Moscow Reuter message, which quotes the General's words, says that there are reliable indications that the Germans, stunned by the Soviet resistance, have not attempted to resume the offensive there, but, rather, fear a Soviet counter-offensive. Significant is their burial of faulty tanks outside Smolensk for use as pill-boxes.

SUCCESS CLAIMED

An Associated Press report from Moscow last night said that Marshal Timoshenko's forces were reported to have encircled and destroyed a large German unit in a strong counter-attack on the central front. The exact location of this Soviet success was not specified in the reports reaching Moscow.

The despatches added that the Germans appeared to be applying heaviest pressure at both ends of the vast front, with attacks in the Ukraine in the south and in the region of the Northern Lakes in the Leningrad sector.

Military quarters in Berlin, claiming that the German Army had secured a firmer foothold on the north shore of the Black Sea by capturing Nikolaiev, sought to leave no doubt that Odessa was Marshal von Rundstedt's next objective in the Ukraine, says the Associated Press. Odessa is the centre of a region where, according to the Germans, a large number of Soviet troops are completely isolated in an area which is hourly being reduced in extent.

Despatches from correspondents at the front claimed that the prospects of the Soviet troops escaping from Odessa by sea were fading, with the Luftwaffe reported to be concentrating with the greatest intensity on ships cruising in the vicinity of Odessa or lying in the harbour. The Germans claimed that in a few hours they had bombed three Soviet warships, including a light cruiser.

Berlin speculated whether the Red Army would be able to dig in at Odessa and make a stand, such as the British are making at Tobruk under somewhat similar circumstances.

German radio last night claimed that German aircraft had bombed industrial objectives and troop concentrations in the Dniepropetrovsk area. Many motor lorries and several tanks were destroyed, it was claimed, while other aircraft bombed the railway junction at Gomel midway between Smolensk and Kiev, together with industrial plants and armament works east of Lake Ilmen, on the northern front.

The Russian communiqué this morning says that, according to incomplete data, nineteen German 'planes were brought down on August 16 in air combats. Twelve Russian 'planes were lost.

ANOTHER BELFAST HOLD-UP

ARMED MEN ESCAPE WITH £70

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Sunday.

About £70 was carried off by two masked and armed men, who held up the manager of the Central Picture House, Smithfield, Belfast, late last night.

The manager, Mr. A. Howarth, was putting away the night's receipts when the armed men entered. He was forced to kneel on the floor at the point of a revolver while the second raider took possession of the money, after which they left. Mr. Howarth tried to communicate with the police, but the telephone was disconnected. He rushed to the hall and sent an attendant for the police, but up to to-night no arrests have been made.

ITALIAN TANKER AT CHANAK

MAY SAIL WITHOUT PILOT

ANKARA, Sunday.—The Italian tanker Tarvisio, which has caused a diplomatic dispute by her application to pass through the Dardanelles to the Black Sea, is still at the Turkish control station of Chanak.

Interest in her future movements is growing here. It is generally thought that she will be allowed to pass through the Straits, but will be given no facilities. All shipping passing through the Straits must, by Turkish law, be accompanied by a pilot, supplied by the port authorities. The refusal of facilities might imply that no pilot will be sent aboard the Tarvisio. Her captain will then have to choose between proceeding through the Straits without a pilot—which is against the law, as well as somewhat dangerous—or returning to his home port.

The Tarvisio, described as an oiler, has been held up for some days. Both British and Italian Ambassadors were understood to have made formal representations. The British view was said to be that the Tarvisio is a warship belonging to a belligerent Power, and, therefore, automatically precluded from passing through the Straits.—Reuter.

SHELLING WARNING IN DOVER AREA

The shelling warning in the Dover area was sounded shortly before midnight last night when German long-range guns on the French coast fired across the Straits during a heavy down pour of rain. The shells were believed to be aimed at a British convoy. No shells fell on land. The bursts of shelling lasted less than ten minutes.

GERMANS CLAIM RAID ON MILDENHALL

BERLIN, Sunday.

German bombers to-day made a "daring surprise raid" on Mildenhall Aerodrome, says the German News Agency, and destroyed six British 'planes on the ground.—(Reuter.)

Cruisers going away before the breeze in the opening event of the Howth Regatta on Saturday.

BOMBING OVER SEA AND LAND

RAIDS ON NORTHERN FRANCE AND GERMANY

THE Royal Air Force, in a series of daylight sweeps over Northern France on Saturday, shot down nineteen German fighters, says the Press Association. While that was going on the new Flying Fortresses were making their second "stratosphere" raid on Brest.

The Air Ministry News Service states that the pilots of an Australian squadron shot down six Messerschmitts in as many minutes while returning from a sweep over Northern France on Saturday evening last. The only damage to their aircraft was one bullet hole. The squadron, states the Air Ministry News Service, had been escorting Blenheim bombers to a target inland, and was crossing the coast on the way back when eight grey-painted Messerschmitts dived on their tails. Two of the German machines were destroyed by the flight-lieutenant leading the squadron, bringing his score up to three for the day.

A pilot officer and three sergeant-pilots, all Australians, destroyed a Messerschmitt apiece. The fight, which began many thousands of feet high, ended at sea level, and the squadron returned home just above the wave-tops.

RAIDS ON COLOGNE AND DUSSELDORF

Objectives in the Rhineland and the Ruhr were bombed by the Royal Air Force on Saturday night.

An Air Ministry communiqué stated: "Although the weather was bad, considerable forces of aircraft of the Bomber Command attacked targets in the Rhineland and the Ruhr. Their efforts were mainly concentrated on objectives in Cologne, Duesseldorf and Duisberg, which were heavily bombed.

"One of our bombers destroyed an enemy fighter.

"Attacks were also made on the docks at Rotterdam and Ostend.

"Thirteen of our aircraft are missing."

"In a day of sustained offensives, pilots of the Fighter Command destroyed seven enemy fighters and damaged many others. Bombers have been escorted to attack shipping off the French coast. 'Flak' ships have been hit and sweeps carried out in which fighters machine-gunned enemy on the ground," states the Air Ministry News Service.

"Two New Zealand pilots found an escort of ten Messerschmitts protecting an enemy convoy. They attacked and saw their fire hitting the enemy aircraft. A Spitfire squadron then arrived and the Messerschmitts drew off.

"Another squadron ordered to attack a 'flak' ship in the convoy escort pressed home their attack low across the ship's deck, in face of terrific fire. Another Spitfire squadron reports breaking up for individual combats which stretched from Cap Gris Nes to Boulogne. They attacked 15 Messerschmitt 109's and destroyed three without loss to themselves."

SATURDAY'S ATTACKS ON BERLIN

BERLIN, Sunday.

The German official News Agency states that "during last night enemy 'planes flew over German territory and dropped a few high explosive and incendiary bombs in Western Germany, causing damage.

"So far," the Agency adds, "seven 'planes are reported to have been brought down.

"A total of 298 civilians lost their lives in Royal Air Force raids over Germany last month," says the German News Agency.—(Reuter.)

The chief officer and three other members of a British South-East coast town fire brigade were killed on Saturday night by a bomb which fell in the grounds of their sleeping quarters, outside which they were standing.

A canteen was destroyed and office premises were wrecked in an East coast town, and fighters were heard almost at once pursuing the raiders.

The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security reported bombs at several points in East and South-East England, but stated that the number of casualties was very small.

GERMAN CLAIMS

Yesterday's German High Command communiqué states:—

"In the struggle against Great Britain a successful day attack of the Luftwaffe was directed against armament factories in Northern Scotland.

"Last night bomber 'planes sank off the English East coast two merchant ships, totalling 5,000 tons, and scored hits on three large freighters.

"In addition, a number of aerodromes and port installations in the east of the island were bombed.

"During its attempt to raid the Channel coast yesterday the British Air Force lost fifteen 'planes in air combat.

"British bombers last night dropped a small number of high explosive and incendiary bombs in several places in Western Germany. No damage of military or economic importance was caused. Night fighters and anti-aircraft artillery shot down eleven of the attacking 'planes."—(Reuter.)

SWOOP ON AXIS CONVOY

DESTROYER AND OTHER SHIPPING SUNK

A destroyer and 17,000 tons of Axis shipping were destroyed by the British Fleet Air Arm and the Royal Air Force in swoops carried out on Friday and the previous night. The fact was mentioned in the Royal Air Force Middle East communiqué on Saturday last. The biggest toll fell to the Fleet aircraft, which attacked with torpedoes a convoy of five merchantmen, escorted by destroyers. One merchant vessel, of 6,000 tons, another of 3,000 tons, and one of the destroyers were sunk.

Further successes were claimed in the Central Mediterranean by Blenheims of the Royal Air Force, which registered hits on two 4,000-ton tankers, and two schooners of 800 tons. One of the tankers blew up, and columns of black smoke came from the fire started on the other. The communiqué claims that "both ships were probably sunk."

Night attacks on shipping in Catania Harbour, Sicily and Augusta Harbour were made by heavy Royal Air Force bombers.

Two British 'planes were lost in these operations.

GERMAN ATTACK ON CONVOY

ONE BOMBER DOWN AND TWO DAMAGED

A British Admiralty communiqué last night stated:—

"One German bomber was destroyed, and two others severely damaged on Saturday evening, when a number of enemy aircraft made a determined, but unsuccessful, attack on one of our convoys. The enemy was met by gunfire, both from the ships in convoy and their escort.

"One bomber crashed into the sea amongst the convoy, and of the damaged aircraft one was burning fiercely when last seen.

"There were no casualties in our ships."

GENERAL SMUTS IN EGYPT

TOUR OF AFRICAN DESERT CAMP

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

CAIRO, Sunday

General and Mrs. Smuts are now on their way back by air from Cairo to Pretoria after a three-day visit to the South African troops in Egypt.

Although both are over 70, they did not appear to be fatigued by their tour of the camps in the desert and nearer the base.

Landing in Cairo after a record flight of two and a half days from Pretoria, they were greeted by Sir Miles Lampson, British Ambassador in Egypt, and Lady Lampson; Mr. Oliver Lyttleton, Minister of State; General Sir Claude Auchinleck, Commander-in-Chief, Middle East, and Admiral Cunningham, Commander-in-Chief, Mediterranean, who flew from a Mediterranean port specially to see General Smuts; Air-Marshal Tedder and Major-General Blamey. General Cunningham, General Officer Commanding, East Africa, arrived in Cairo in General Smuts's 'plane.

General Smuts had a series of important conferences with Empire military and civil leaders in the Middle East in the intervals between visits by air to his troops.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Smuts concentrated particularly on the South African Women Auxiliaries, whom she visited in desert camps and rest homes.

Addressing troops in the desert, General Smuts said that he did not think it would be necessary for South Africans to serve outside Africa, where there was sufficient work for them.

In Cairo General Smuts opened a club for South African officers.

General Smuts said that Armageddon might be fought out in the Middle East, and the South Africans would play their part fighting for the most sacred and precious thing in this world. "A man's life," he added, "is precious, but, weighed against the causes for which we are fighting, it is nothing at all, and we must be prepared to sacrifice our lives and our comforts in order to create a better world."

SICILIAN PORT BOMBED

"FLAMES 800 FEET HIGH"

PRESS ASSOCIATION.

LONDON, Sunday.

The following communiqué was issued at British G.H.Q., Cairo, to-day:—

"Libya—At Tobruk our patrols continue their activity, inflicting casualties on enemy working parties. In the frontier area the situation remains unchanged."

An R.A.F. Middle East communiqué states:—

"Sicily—Heavy bombers of the R.A.F. carried out a successful raid on the port of Catania, in Sicily, during the night of August 15-16. Many heavy bombs were dropped on the central Mole, the railway station, customs buildings and warehouses, causing one large fire and many smaller ones. Later an explosion occurred, with flames rising to 800 feet, which were visible seventy miles away. Sweeps by fighter aircraft were carried out over Southern Sicily yesterday, but no combats resulted.

"Cyrenaica—During the night of August 15-16 our bombers raided the aerodromes of Berka and Benina and the ports of Bardia and Benghazi. At Benina direct hits were registered on hangars and administrative buildings. The control offices were set on fire and numbers of explosions were caused.

"At Berka aircraft dispersed on the ground were attacked. Aircraft of the fleet air arm, supported by R.A.F. bombers, successfully raided Bardia, and bombed shipping at Benghazi. Enemy gun positions east of our defences at Tobruk were subjected to heavy bombardment by a combined force of bombers and fighters of the R.A.F. and the South African Air Force. Our fighters intercepted and damaged an Italian bomber over Gambut.

"Malta was raided four times during the night of August 15-16, but only very minor damage was done. From all these operations one of our aircraft is missing."

ITALIAN VERSION

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

ROME, Sunday.

To-day's official Italian communiqué says: "The British Air Force last night again attacked the towns of Catania and Syracuse, where it was received by violent fire from our ground defences. High explosive and incendiary bombs hit dwelling houses. There was some damage, but no casualties. During the attack on Catania on August 15, the casualties were eighteen dead and twenty-five wounded.

"British 'planes attacked Bardia, Derna, and Benghazi. There were two dead and a few wounded. The ground defences shot down one enemy bomber.

"In East Africa, in the Gondar sector and on the Celga front, clashes occurred between our troops and enemy units, who suffered losses and were put to flight."

JAPAN AND THE ALLIES

FREEZING ORDER EXTENDED

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

TOKYO, Sunday.

JAPAN has opened new trade talks with the Netherlands East Indies to end the "freezing" war.

A Domei despatch from Batavia says that these are making such smooth progress that a resumption of normal trade relations is expected next week. "Virtually all trade questions have been settled, but technical problems concerning the export of new goods to Japan are still being discussed," it adds.

Meanwhile, about 1,000 British and American patents will be affected by an extension of the scope of the Japanese "freezing" order. The new measure prohibits the withdrawal from Japan of money derived from the use of patent rights by firms belonging to those countries against which the "freezing" order is aimed.

NO DEMAND ON THAI

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

LONDON, Sunday.

A Thai communiqué to-day denies a report that Britain has demanded from the Thai Government control of the Aranyaprades railway line, threatening forcible measures in the event of non-compliance. There is no truth whatever in this foreign newspaper report, the communiqué says. Aranyaprades is a railway terminus 150 miles east of Bangkok, on the old Thai-Indo-China frontier.

An official statement was issued at Singapore to-day by Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, Commander-in-Chief, Far East, regarding rumours that he had threatened Thailand with the use of force. "A typical flight of fancy, and I deny it emphatically," he said. "There is no atom of truth in it. I endorse the statement made yesterday by Sir Josiah Crosby, the British Minister to Thailand, that we have made no demands whatsoever on the Government of Thailand."

RUSSIA WARNED

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

TOKYO Sunday.

The Anglo-American proposal to send British and United States representatives to Moscow draws from the Nichi Nichi Shimbun a warning to Russia, that "it is of vital importance to the Soviet Union to repel such overtures which will eventually mean a move for the encirclement of Japan." Asserting that Britain and the United States are continuing to interfere in Japan's activity in East Asia, the paper asks whether "the fact that Japan was not mentioned in the Roosevelt-Churchill declaration is merely one of the manœuvres against Japan." The paper states that Britain and the United States, by aiding the Soviet Union, are attempting to check Germany, and at the same time are creating a rift between Japan and the Soviet Union.

IN INDO-CHINA

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

SAIGON, Saturday.

A second contingent of Japanese troops, who are to take up positions in Southern Indo-China, is expected to arrive off Cape Saint Jacques to-night. Disembarkation will begin at Saigon to-morrow. General Sumita, head of the Japanese mission to Indo-China, is returning to Hanoi to-day.

A new Federal Council for French Indo-China, on lines similar to the National Council in France, has been set up by Admiral Decoux, the Governor-General. The Council will consist of 25 members, whose rôle will be purely consultative.

BRITISH ATTACK ON TANKER

The British Air Ministry last night stated:—

"This afternoon Beaufort aircraft of the Coastal Command, escorted by fighters, attacked an enemy tanker in the Channel off Le Touquet. A hit was obtained with a torpedo on the tanker's stern.

"Our fighters have made many offensive sweeps over the Channel and Northern France during the day, in the course of which they destroyed seven enemy fighters. Our losses in these operations were two fighters and one bomber. Three of the bomber's crew of four were saved."

U.S. SHIP REFUSED CLEARANCE

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Saturday.

The State Department has disclosed that the Japanese Government has refused to grant clearance papers to the American steamship President Coolidge if it was sought to use her for the evacuation of more than 100 private American citizens now in Japan.

MR. ROOSEVELT BACK IN WASHINGTON

IMPORTANT CONFERENCE WITH MR. HULL

WHEN President Roosevelt arrived in Washington yesterday he had a lengthy conference with Mr. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State.

It is understood that among the matters they discussed were the Three-Power Conference in Moscow, the Far East crisis, with special reference to Japan's attitude towards the American liner President Coolidge.

Speaking to Press men on board the Potomac, at Rockland, Maine, President Roosevelt expressed his confidence that Russia would hold out against the Germans through the winter.

From Moscow it is announced that M. Stalin has received the Roosevelt-Churchill message, and has expressed the "heartfelt thanks" of the Russian people for the promised aid.

WHAT WAS DISCUSSED

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Sunday.

Immediately upon his return to Washington from Rockland, Maine, to-day, after his historic meeting with Mr. Churchill at sea, President Roosevelt summoned Mr. Cordell Hull, his Secretary of State, to a conference.

Congress leaders will meet the President to-morrow, probably to discuss another lease-lend appropriation of 10,000,000,000 dollars (£2,500,000,000) or more.

It is believed that President Roosevelt and Mr. Cordell Hull discussed particularly developments in the Far East, including Japan's action over the American liner President Coolidge. The Japanese Government, it was disclosed by the State Department yesterday, will only permit the liner to enter a Japanese port to take off American official personnel.

President Roosevelt presumably also discussed with Mr. Cordell Hull the date of the Three-Power Arms Conference in Moscow, and who will represent America.

Mr. Hull, who was nearly two and a half hours with the President, told reporters:—"The conference was a general interchange of the information in which we brought each other up to date on the international situation. We discussed all the phases in which either of us is interested"!

Mr. Harry Hopkins, whose visit to Europe for President Roosevelt preceded last week's conference, has returned to Washington.

MR. ROOSEVELT ON RUSSIA

"WILL HOLD OUT THROUGH WINTER"

WASHINGTON, Sunday.

President Roosevelt, immediately after his yacht Potomac docked at Rockland, Maine, to-night, said that the United States was no nearer war as a result of his high-seas meeting with the British Premier, Mr. Winston Churchill, but declared that he was confident that Russia would hold out against the Germans through the winter.

He was in complete agreement with Mr. Churchill on all aspects of the war situation.

He told this to newspaper men at a Press conference held on board the Potomac as soon as it had moored at Rockland.

President Roosevelt described his meeting with Mr. Churchill as "eminently successful," and said that the next step would be no more than a further interchange of ideas. He gave no indication of any concrete action which might follow the announcement of the Eight-Point Plan, and refused to divulge the whereabouts of Mr. Churchill or to mention the site of the meeting place.

So far as aid to the Soviet is concerned, the President spoke of supplies for next spring and summer, and said that the U.S.S.R.'s "fitting needs" had been discussed.—(Reuter.)

MESSAGE HANDED TO STALIN

RUSSIA WELCOMES CONFERENCE

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.

MOSCOW, Saturday.

An official statement issued by the Tass Agency and broadcast from Moscow in English, French and German said that Mr. Steinhardt and Sir Stafford Cripps, the United States and British Ambassadors in Moscow, called on M. Stalin yesterday and handed him the message drafted by Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill dealing with aid to Russia. Stalin has welcomed the proposal to call a conference in Moscow of representatives of the United States, Britain and the Soviet. He expressed the "heartfelt thanks" of the peoples of the Soviet Union at this readiness to aid the U.S.S.R.

A NEW STAGE

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

Sunday.

"A new stage brings in the development of collaboration between the three great Powers," says Prada, the organ of the Communist Party, in a long editorial article on the Churchill-Roosevelt message to Stalin, quoted by Moscow radio. "The Soviet people have received with satisfaction the information that the United States and Great Britain are ready to render large-scale assistance to the Soviet Union, and are already beginning to do so—that, as the message put it, many loaded ships have already left British and American ports, and still others will leave shortly in order to supply the Soviet Union with the war equipment required for the strenuous struggle against the Fascist armies."

"AN OUTRAGE," SAYS DR. GOEBBELS

BERLIN, Sunday.

Writing in the Voelkischer Beobachter to-day, Dr. Goebbels described the Anglo-American declaration as "an outrage against common-sense." "Do they really believe that we are so dismally stupid as to be deceived by this clumsy piece of bluffing?" he asked. "We never expected too much from the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting, but even in our wildest dreams we hardly dared to imagine that it would be so barren and stupid.

"Anyone who wishes to see us without arms must come along and disarm us. The German people surrendered its arms only once, and that was in November, 1918. That will not happen again."—(Reuter.)

ALLEGED ALARM

MOSCOW, Sunday.

The Anglo-American declaration has caused alarm and consternation in Nazi circles in Germany, says Moscow radio, quoting reports from Geneva.

"All the German papers have commented on this declaration, stating that it will have no effect on the Germans, but their apprehension is disclosed in the numerous comments and the prominent place given to them in the German papers. The German Press did not print the exact text of the declaration; nevertheless its contents spread quickly among the German people."—(Reuter.)

MR. HULL ON INVASION DANGER

WASHINGTON, Saturday.

Mr. Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, reminded newspapermen here to-day that he had frequently given warning of the danger facing the United States and other countries in the Western Hemisphere from an invasion at some point in South America, particularly those regions producing surplus raw materials.—Reuter.

NO NEW IRISH MINISTER

TWO POSTS FOR MR. LEMASS

BY OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

NO new Minister will be appointed to fill the vacancy in the Government cause by the resignation of Mr. Patrick J. Ruttledge on Thursday last.

The Irish Times learned last night, through the Government Information Bureau, that the Taoiseach has assigned the Department of Local Government and Public Health (which was held by Mr. Ruttledge) to Mr. Sean MacEntee, heretofore Minister for Industry and Commerce. The Department of Industry and Commerce has been assigned to Mr. Sean Lemass, who will continue to act as Minister for Supplies.

The changes were carried out pursuant to Section 5 of the Ministers and Secretaries (Amendment) Act, 1939.

Mr. Sean MacEntee, who was Finance Minister in Mr. de Valera's first Cabinet, continued to hold that office until the reshuffle shortly after the outbreak of the war. He then replaced Mr. Sean Lemass as Minister for Industry and Commerce, Mr. Lemass being assigned to the newly-created Department of Supplies.

It had been thought that Mr. de Valera would have taken the opportunity caused by the resignation of Mr. Ruttledge to introduce some "new blood" into the Government.

ANGLO-SOVIET TRADE PACT

£10,000,000 CREDIT TO RUSSIA

A new era in Anglo-Soviet trade relations was opened with the signing in Moscow on Saturday of a barter agreement, with a British credit of at least £10,000,000 in addition. Negotiations for a trade agreement dragged on over several months last year and never reached fruition because of political difficulties. These were dissolved by the entry of Russia into the war.

The agreement provides for supplies of considerable quantities of British goods to the U.S.S.R. as well as the supply of Soviet goods to the United Kingdom.

The British Government grants to the U.S.S.R. a credit of £10,000,000 sterling at 3 per cent for an average period of five years. When this credit is exhausted the two Governments will enter into negotiations for a further amount.

Britain is understood to be sending to the Soviet Union rubber, tin, wool, hides, jute, shellac and industrial diamonds in exchange for Russian platinum, hemp, flax, manganese, glycerine and timber.

FRENCH PROTESTS TO BRITAIN

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

LONDON, Sunday.

The French Government has protested to the British Government about pressure alleged being brought to bear on French troops in Syria by General Catroux to join General de Gaulle, says Lyons Radio.

BOMBS ON SOUTH-EAST SCOTLAND

Sunday night's Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security communiqué stated:—

"A single enemy aircraft dropped bombs this afternoon at a point near the south-east coast of Scotland, causing some damage. A very small number of casualties was caused by machine-gun fire from the enemy aircraft."

The British and Soviet representatives at Teheran have again drawn the attention of the Iranian Government to the concern felt by their two Governments at "the excessively large number of Germans in Iran."

RECONSTRUCTION OF NORTH STRAND

PLAN FOR 500 FLAT-DWELLERS

Outlines of 18-acre area to be acquired under War Damage, Property, Bill.

Black lines show portions of site for proposed 500 flats.

Cross-hatching indicates areas not to be acquired.

By CIVIS.

BY courtesy of the Editor of the Irish Builder and Engineer it now is possible to present an outline map of the clearance and reconstruction scheme which was described in the Irish Times of the 9th instant.

As the portions of the site which lie towards Summerhill Parade accommodate many buildings which were not seriously damaged by bombing, it may be assumed that the clearance and rebuilding of such portions will be effected by gradual stages, the Corporation meanwhile acting as landlords of occupied premises.

PREPARATORY OPERATIONS

The portions of the irreparably destroyed premises (which lie mainly along North Strand frontages) are estimated to cover between eight and ten acres—an area equal, approximately, to that of Merrion square.

It is assumed the Corporation, when the vesting order is approved by the Minister for Local Government, will at once proceed to prepare that section of the area for buildings to be erected when materials again become available. The completion of clearance operations, levelling of sites and laying of foundations—for which the necessary materials are now available—provide immediate opportunities to give considerable "relief" employment.

In that event, immediate decisions must be reached as to whether the flat-building plan illustrated on map, or some alternative plan, is to be adopted. Whatever plan ultimately may be approved of, it seems to be evident that it should embrace the whole 18-acre area.

If due regard be had to the admittedly excessive costs of four-storey flats, to the fact that North Strand is the main thoroughfare to the whole north coastal residential area, and to the Irish Times' suggestion that its frontages should be occupied by public baths and playgrounds, or other open spaces, it would appear that the lay-out shown on map requires serious reconsideration.

£500,000 FOR BUILDING

While the extensive playground and the proposed wide parkways between flat frontages and thoroughfares, shown on map, indicate distinct advances on the amenities which characterise other tenement-flat schemes sight should not be lost of the fact that the cost of the building scheme proposed cannot be estimated at less than £500,000 over and above the costs of site acquisition and clearance.

From the purely economic aspect, and apart from other objections to block-tenement dwellings, there seem to be very strong reasons to consider such alternatives as devoting the estimated building outlay of £500,000 to the provision of, say, 1,000 cottage dwellings on "virgin" lands which lie about a mile distant from North Strand.

CITY'S MOST CROWDED AREA

A density-census of the surroundings of North Strand would almost certainly show that the whole district is the city's most seriously overcrowded area. If 1,000 families could be removed from such surroundings to conveniently-situated suburban dwellings, instead of rehousing 500 families in their centre, the case for decentralisation would seem to be unanswerable.

Let it be added that such suggestions are not advanced in disparagement of the Corporation's prompt and comprehensive steps to deal with an emergency, nor of the architectural merits of the scheme as proposed. One can only regret the need for critical comment on an unusually attractive plan.

TRADES' UNION RIVALRY

STRIKE ACTION NOT ANTICIPATED

Although resolutions to refrain from participation in the elections of the Tramways Branch of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union, and not to pay further subscriptions to that union, had been passed by meetings of tram and 'bus workers held in the Mansion House on Thursday and Friday under the auspices of the Amalgamated Transport and General Workers' Union, the voting in the election held on Friday last was practically normal, stated Mr. William Murphy, Tramways Branch Secretary.

The subscriptions collected on Friday, it was stated, were higher than usual in some of the bigger depôts, and where there had been any reduction it was very slight—"certainly not enough to justify reports of transfers in any numbers to the A.T. and G.W.U."

The results of the election were as follows:—Mr. John Conway, re-elected president; Mr. H. Hearst, vice-president; Ringsend Depôt—P. O'Brien (drivers), J. O'Keeffe (conductors); Clontarf Depôt—J. Branagan (drivers), T. Wandsborough (conductors); Donnybrook—P. Conway (drivers), P. Carr (conductors); Conyngham road—M. Dunbar (drivers), S. Hutton (conductors); Summerhill—J. Thompson (drivers), P. Dooley (conductors); Blackrock—J. Rowe (conductors), M. Murphy (motormen); Dalkey—J. Magarahan (motormen); Terenure—P. Tierney (motormen), T. O'Brien (conductors).

It is learned that no action by the A.T. and G.W.U. is likely until the collection of signatures of those wishing to transfer to that union is completed. Strike action at any time is not anticipated.

It is considered likely that as soon as the collection of signatures is completed the A.T. and G.W.U. will approach the company for recognition as a union entitled to negotiate on behalf of D.U.T. Company employés.

Pickets of the dismissed men continue to patrol the offices of the D.U.T. Company in O'Connell street. Seven men were dismissed. The other three men who were under notice are believed to have become members of the I.T. and G.W.U.

MORE WASTE PAPER WANTED

APPEAL TO HOUSE-HOLDERS

It is to be feared that a good deal of waste paper that could be turned to a useful purpose is being destroyed. In rural parts, it is believed, much of the paper is being thrown on dumps or otherwise destroyed. It is suggested also that even in the city, where collecting facilities are easily available, all is not being done that might be. There are many shops, some cinemas, public-houses and other places where receptacles for waste paper could be placed for collection when full, thus saving a good deal that is at present being lost. Organisations such as the St. John Ambulance Brigade, the St. Vincent de Paul Society, the Legion of Mary or the Catholic Boy Scouts would be very glad to collect the paper from such places.

COUNTRY PEOPLE HELPING

Mrs. Hilda Nolan, of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, yesterday discussed the matter with an Irish Times reporter. "If paper is being lost, it is not through apathy or unwillingness on the part of the people in the rural districts," said Mrs. Nolan. "There are many things to be considered. There is the matter of storage and carriage. The principal mills are situated in the vicinity of Dublin. Now, the smallest quantity on which the merchants will pay carriage is one ton—and one ton means a great deal of paper and takes up an awful lot of space. I should not be surprised if some people get tired holding it and decide to throw it away.

"But in spite of all the difficulties, people are saving waste paper in the country districts, through the schools, Parish Councils and other organisations.

COLLECTION SATISFACTORY

Mrs. Nolan told our reporter that the St. John Ambulance Brigade's waste paper collection was going on nicely. They had in the year since they started made over £500 by the sale of waste paper. At first they had been getting only £2 a ton controlled price, but the price had been increased to £4 a ton, and it would be more if they could deliver it to the merchant.

The St. John Ambulance distributes bags among householders, and these, when full, are collected by Boy Scouts with handcarts. Messrs. Findlater were helping to collect bags from outlying districts.

Their collecting organisation also operated in some country parts. Mr. Odlum had been very kind in forwarding bags free of charge to Dublin from the Kildare district.

A WEEK embracing five days' racing in succession concluded with a very successful meeting on Saturday at Baldoyle. Mr. F. S. Myerscough, the man of the hour among owners, added to his many recent successes by winning the Fingall Handicap with Milady Rose and the Sutton Plate with Power, while his Historian was second to Warthrift in the Juvenile Plate, and Lull occupied a similar position behind Sammy's Rock in the Somerton Plate.

Milady Rose, carrying 9st. 10lb., was pulling double all through her race, the while Jungle Cat acted as pacemaker, and when M. Wing roused her in the straight she came past her opponents one after the other to win with the greatest ease from Prudent Rose and First Visit—a very striking performance.

Power had no less than thirteen rivals in the Sutton Plate, run over the seven furlongs course. He had shown signs of laziness in some of his recent races, but he had the most suitable type of jockey in W. Barrett in the saddle now. Mastership, to whom he was conceding 17lb., made most of the running, and when Miss Paget's horse shook off Diamond Link at the entrance to the straight all seemed plain sailing for him. Barrett was hard at Power all the way from this point, and the horse, answering gamely, got up close home to win by half a length. Manor Flat, who was always prominent, finished third, another half length away.

BROWN ADMIRAL AGAIN

The most popular win at the meeting was that of Mr. A. D. Comyn's very consistent horse, Brown Admiral, in the Metropolitan Steeplechase. He already had won four races off the reel, but was now attempting something much bigger than hitherto. General Chiang headed him once or twice on the second round, but each time Brown Admiral, thanks to his fine, bold jumping, drew away again, and won with a lot in hand. It has been said of him that he does not stay beyond two miles, but over a journey of two miles and a quarter now he left the others hopelessly tailed off. Colehill was third, and Sarawaki, a winner at Dundalk, to whom he was conceding 2st. 6lb., was fourth. Pantry, who has developed a habit of swallowing his tongue, was out of the reckoning early on, and eventually he was pulled up.

Mr. B. Kerr's Warthrift, a son of Umidwar, made an example of a big field in the Juvenile Plate, leading all the way to score in a canter from Historian. Sammy's Rock, who won the only six furlongs race for two years old run so far this season, has changed ownership since, and now, carrying Mr. J. McGrath's colours, he confirmed the good impression formed of him by winning the Somerton Plate. Those who laid odds on his chance, however, were not at all on good terms with themselves during the early stages, and for most of the way it looked long odds on Mr. Myerscough scoring his third success with Lull. Answering gamely to M. Wing's vigorous riding, however, Sammy's Rock wore the other down in convincing style and showed that he will be a horse to be reckoned with over longer journeys.

Miss Paget, whose horses had been twice placed second, got her turn when Commissioner got the better of a good finish with Legislation to win the Malahide Plate. Details:—

CYCLING
WHYTE LEADS ALL THE WAY

J. J. Whyte (City and Suburban) won the 100 kilometres (62½ miles) scratch race promoted by the National Club in Phoenix Park yesterday. Whyte and Freeney (National) got away from the field after five laps of the four miles course, but Freeney shortly afterwards punctured and retired. Whyte was not overtaken, and won by a minute and a half (time, 2 hours 52 mins. 24 secs.) from D. S. Troy (City and Suburban), with P. Brady (Shamrock) third.

City and Suburban won the team award easily with 10 points (1, 2 and 4). Whyte's break-away enabled him to secure the "primes" award for the leader with the greatest number of points, of which there were three on each lap.

Quinn and Boucher in Rapid Scoring Spell

HANDSOMELY winning a race with the clock, Phœnix beat Y.M.C.A. at Claremont road by 8 wickets. The Young Men batted first, and ran up the useful score of 175 in just over three hours, R. J. Gill playing a fine innings of 91 not out, and D. R. Pigot bowling so effectively that he had 7 wickets for 27 runs.

Phœnix, set to get the runs in an hour and fifty minutes, accomplished their task with twelve minutes to spare. They scored rapidly from the start, but when F. M. Quinn was joined by J. C. Boucher at 53 the pace became furious, Boucher in particular excelling. Both men hit all round, and, showing great understanding, got the utmost from their fine batting, and, without being separated, passed their opponents' total.

MERRION WIN

Pembroke might have won their Senior League match with Merrion at Sydney Parade on Saturday had their early batsmen displayed a little more enterprise. Merrion, who had first use of an easy-paced wicket, were dismissed in two and a half hours for 174, but the first six Pembroke wickets took close on two hours to make 92 runs. The "tail" wagged splendidly, however, and the total reached 150 before the innings closed just a few minutes from time. Merrion thus won by 24 runs, and are still in the running for championship honours.

There was nothing outstanding in the batting line by either side. W. Lindsay and P. Waldron put on 53 for the third Merrion wicket. The former took over an hour to make his 31 and the best contribution of the innings was the 36 not out by J. D. O'Connor, who batted with confidence and hit five boundaries. M. B. Williams headed the batting list for Pembroke with 27, and J. T. Egan, the Blackrock College boy, showed very promising form in making 25.

FURLEY'S HAT-TRICK

At Castle avenue Clontarf gained an easy victory over Civil Service by six wickets. The policy of the Clontarf captain, who, though winning the toss, sent Civil Service in to bat, worked out very well, as Civil Service could only muster the meagre total of 43, no batsman reaching double figures. Hill and Furley bowled unchanged, Furley taking the honours with the splendid analysis of 5 for 14, which included the "hat trick." Hill took 4 wickets for 22.

Caprani batted stylishly for Clontarf, and his innings of 33 (not out) included six boundaries.

BRIGHT BATTING BY SOUTH SIDE

The match in aid of the Red Cross, between strong teams selected from North Side and South Side clubs, played yesterday at Rathmines, ended in a draw, rain interrupting when two hours still remained for play. The South Side, under the captaincy of F. G. Connell, gave a bright display of batting, and in three and a quarter hours were able to declare with 8 wickets down for 247. A feature was the stand between P. Waldron and J. D'Arcy in support of the fifth wicket. They added 115 runs, and Waldron, who had opened the innings, was out when only two runs short of his century. He was batting just two hours, and, though never forceful, batted with confidence, gave no chance and hit five boundaries. D'Arcy batted freely, and was at the wickets only seventy minutes for 59.

D. R. Pigot did the best work for the North side, taking 3 wickets at a cost of 15 runs apiece and was not long knocking up 39, in the course of which he found the boundary on seven occasions. Score:—

Landy's Style Wins Another Cup

By MASTER McGRATH.

The scene at Shelbourne Park on Saturday night reminded one of "Derby Night," the stands being packed, and the utmost enthusiasm prevailing from the start of the first race to the decision of the eighth. It was in such an atmosphere that the memory was kept of that sterling courser, the late Mr. Hugh McAlinden, of Belfast, one of the pioneers of greyhound racing in this country. Just prior to the parading of the quintette who battled out the final for the McAlinden Cup, the crowd had been thrilled by a magnificent display of pace and "tracking skill" by Another Dancing Willie, winner of the trophy last season, who, by covering the 525 yards in 29.99 seconds, proved how unfortunate he was in the heat in which he was beaten. That sterling performance, however, was a secondary consideration with the crowds, who immediately settled down to the business that brought them to the park.

One that would have been well backed for the Cup was Jungle Freak. It was announced officially that he met with a slight mishap on Friday and his number did not appear in the board. When the betting opened, Mr P. Hoctor's Landy's Style was instantly installed favourite at evens, with Ruby Robert and Prince Norroy at threes, Ruddel's Tento and Maiden's Hero being the outsiders.

They broke in a bunch with Landy's Style slightly in front of Ruby Robert and Ruddel's Tento. Prince Norroy had the worst of it as they swung round the first bend, when Ruddel's Tento drew into second place. Before they came to the second turn, Landy's Style began to increase the margin between him and Ruddel's Tento. Then Prince Norroy, who was drawn No. 5 box, showed his paces, and was going a great bat as they made the bend for home; but Landy's Style had his fell measure, and it was by a couple of lengths that he held on to secure the honours and supplement his Easter Cup triumph; Ruddel's Tento was five lengths off the winner in third berth. The time was 30.25 secs., which the three placed have bettered more than once this season.

HUGH McALINDEN MEMORIAL CUP. Winner, £150 and Cup value £50; second, £50; third, £15; unplaced dogs £5; heat winner, £5; second, £3; third £1.

Egan Beats Kemp at Fifth Attempt

BY OUR LAWN TENNIS CORRESPONDENT.

AFTER five weeks of unbroken success in singles play, in the course of which he won the Irish Open, Co. Dublin, East of Ireland, Ardee and Youghal Championships, C. A. Kemp met with defeat at Bray on Saturday, losing the Co. Wicklow title, which he won last year, to R. F. Egan.

An indication that he was not in as dominating form as usual was given in the semi-final, in which he had an extremely narrow escape at the hands of J. McHale. In the final he again got off to a slow start, but in the second set his hitting was beautifully crisp and clean, and it appeared as if he was getting on top.

The final set, however, was a thriller. They fought point for point to 2-all, and then Egan went away to 4-2. Kemp took three in a row to lead 5-4, but Egan held his own service for 5-all.

The next game proved the turning point. Kemp had five points for 6-5, but twice double-faulted, and, after saving the situation with a couple of good smashes, saw the game slip away from him. He held on to six-all, but Egan won the next two for the match. His ground shots have seldom looked safer and his passing shots and lobs were well executed, but Kemp had not quite the fire of previous weeks.

WOMEN'S FINAL

Miss Mary Blayney had not the experience to win her first big open final in Dublin, but she made a sturdy fight of it, after a bad start. Mrs. Lister was brilliant in the first set, and won the first five games; she was also in front at 3-1 in the second, but Miss Blayney caught her and held on to 4-all before going down.

The winner's driving was crisper, and she had the ability to volley, which her opponent lacked, but Miss Blayney covered the court in fine style, and, had she attacked more on the forearm, might have done better. Mrs. Lister won her first Irish tournament in impressive style.

MEN'S DOUBLES

The two leading men's doubles pairs were in opposition for the fourth time this season, and, as Kemp and E. H. Maynard beat Egan and Fannin over the best of three sets, they made the score 2-all in matches.

It was an interesting struggle, which swung from one pair to the other, until Maynard struck an almost inspired patch in the last set, making hardly an error off the ground or on the low volley. He and Kemp went away to 4-1, and got home at 6-3. In the first set they led 3-1, only to lose five games in a row, and in the second, they were in front at 5-2, but were caught at 5-all before breaking through Fannin's service for the set. There is little or nothing between these pairs at the present time.

An unusual pairing, Miss N. Stoker and Miss O. Poole, won the women's doubles from the tried combination of Miss B. Good and Miss Nichols. Miss Stoker's volleying was first class, but the losers were uneven owing to Miss Nichols being off form until well into the second set.

The mixed doubles final was postponed until this evening at 6.30, and the men's handicap doubles final will also be played this evening.

Irish Professional Championship

Winner of the Irish Professional Championship last year at Little Island, Cork, where he deposed at the last moment the leader, Harry Bradshaw, Fred Daly, of Derry City, will defend his title on Wednesday and Thursday next at Rosses Point. Third at Cork to Bradshaw, Paddy Mahon is also entered. Half a dozen hail from the Ulster Branch, and 38 contenders in all is a very satisfactory entry in prevailing conditions. Freed for the time being of his handicap of plus 3, off which he played in the Union competitions, Bradshaw will likely be seen to much better advantage than in the handicap tournaments, but the champion in the Ulster competitions has shown consistently good form, and it would not be surprising if the championship again resolved itself into a struggle between North and South—the holder, and the Kilcroney representative. Play begins each day at 10 o'clock, the second round starting at 2 o'clock.

ITALIANS CLAIM SUBMARINE SUNK

ROME, Sunday.—An Italian torpedo boat claims to have sunk a submarine in South-East Mediterranean waters. "On August 6," says the Italian News Agency, "the torpedo boat, attacked by a submerged submarine, which fired two torpedoes, avoided these by a rapid manœuvre. The commander of the torpedo boat followed the submarine's track and dropped depth charges. One explosion was bigger than the others, indicating that at least one hit had been scored. Immediately afterwards a patch of oil was seen on the surface of the water and this grew rapidly. Other depth charges were dropped, and the oil spread so as to leave no doubt of the success of the attack."—(Reuter.)

President Roosevelt's Return

President Roosevelt returned to Washington yesterday from his ocean rendezvous with Mr. Winston Churchill. He has had, upon the whole, an excellent "press" throughout the United States, but it is already clear that his latest departure from presidential convention has created anger and alarm among the "isolationists," who will redouble their attacks during the coming weeks. Their argument is that the meeting, and its most spectacular result, the eight-point agreement, have committed the United States to the hazards of war almost as surely as if she had dropped bombs on Berlin. After it, they say, it would not be in the least surprising if the "Axis" Powers should regard America as having transgressed the bounds of even the most elastic neutrality. The President declines to accept their contention; the United States, he replies, is not a step nearer to actual war in consequence of the meeting on the high seas. Nevertheless, he must face a trying ordeal. Although all the evidence is that the great mass of the American people stands four-square behind his policy of aid for the democracies, the "isolationists" still are powerful both inside and outside Congress. They showed their strength last week when Congress threw out a presidential bill that sought to extend the period of compulsory military service, and they still muster millions of adherents throughout the country. It would be idle to deny that Herr Hitler's invasion of Russia disturbed the consciences of many Americans. They are pleased to find themselves once again on the same side as Great Britain, with whom most Americans regard themselves as linked by special bonds, and they have a holy horror of National-Socialist Germany; but many of them distrust the Soviet Union and have no desire to lend her any form of assistance. The President is not affected by any such doubts. He wants Germany to be beaten, and he is willing to lend a hand to any nation whatsoever that can assist Britain to beat her. He has promised the Russians that they will receive American aid. Yesterday the American and British Ambassadors called upon Stalin to acquaint him of the precise help that both countries hope to extend to Russia, and President Roosevelt himself believes that he will be in a position to supply her with arms and munitions by next spring. It remains to be seen whether the people will receive this intimation—together with the tidings of a three-Power conference in Moscow—with the same good-will that they have accorded the programme of aid for Great Britain and China. We have no doubt that the President will bring them over to his point of view, but he may have a hard fight in Congress.

One thing that will convert even the most perfervid "isolationist," in all probability, will be a Japanese attack upon Russia. Whether such an attack ought to be expected is uncertain; but the rumours of Japanese troop concentrations on the Siberian border of Manchukuo come thick and fast. The possibility remains that all the Japanese activity in the neighbourhood of Thailand has been merely a feint, designed to camouflage the real intention, an attack on Russia; it even may be that Japan has nerve enough to try conclusions in south and north simultaneously. If Japan goes to war with Russia, and if the British—as they are bound to do—look upon her action as tantamount to a declaration of war upon themselves, the United States probably will take up the challenge with good-will; for she fears Japan above all other enemies. Relations with Japan are extremely bad, and they have not been improved by the Japanese Government's refusal of permission to the American liner, President Coolidge, to "evacuate" private citizens of the United States. Nobody would be surprised if America should find herself at war with Japan in a matter of weeks, or even of days. The plunge would have been taken long ago if the Japanese had been certain of themselves; but the combination of Great Britain, the United States, Russia and China must be enough to daunt even the most ardent of Prince Konoye's fire-eating generals—especially when there is no prospect that Japan will receive direct assistance in any shape or form from her "Axis" partners. For that matter, she almost certainly would have been in the war by now if Herr Hitler had contrived to inflict a crushing defeat upon the Russian armies in the west, thereby diverting the whole anxieties of the democratic nations to Europe and the Atlantic. As matters stand, Herr Hitler does not seem likely to achieve success in Russia before winter compels him to suspend operations, and there is a fair possibility that the Japanese will prefer to lie low and bide their time. At present they are doing useful work for the "Axis"; they compel Russia to immobilise a powerful army in Siberia, and they prevent the American Navy from giving Britain all the assistance that President Roosevelt could desire. What more could they do if they were actually at war?

A Census of Servants

In order to release more young women for war work the British Government has decided to make investigations into the "servant situation" in Great Britain, and proposes, in cases where the number of servants is out of proportion to the amount of work, to see that the redundant staff shall be put to war work. Newspaper reports give the impression that the inquiry will be made in a most discreet manner. It seems that "shrewd interviewing officers"—to quote from the report in one newspaper—will be given the duty of discovering the number of households with large staffs of servants, and, when they have made their reports, the Government will send "polite letters"—again to quote from the same report—to the householder. The latter will be in the form of a questionnaire, which, when fully answered, should prove a justification for the number of servants; and if the Government receives no reply within seven days it will be taken as an indication that the servants in question are not actually needed, and could be spared for work of greater national importance. It is possible that there are many servants in Great Britain who could be released for war work in this way, but in the present hard times it is not likely that the officers will find very many swollen staffs. Quite apart from the effects of the war, the period of large staffs of servants has gone out. There was a time in England when any such questionnaire would bring forward not only a large number of scullery-maids, chamber-maids and parlour-maids, but also a considerable number of able-bodied men, weighed down with magnificent livery, powdered wigs, and that particular variety of superior smirk which happened to suit the costume. Nowadays, apart from a few rich Americans, who spend the best part of their time and their money playing at being millionaires, people do not bother to have many servants. The greater bulk of the nation—or, rather, of the minority that can afford servants at all—are satisfied with one maid-of-all-work per household, while even the wealthy are remarkably sparing in this respect, limiting themselves, very often, to a chauffeur, a parlourmaid and a cook. Nowadays, too, the size of the staff is not—as formerly it used to be—a fair indication to the wealth and quality of the master.

Shaw On The Screen

The fact that the screen version of Mr. George Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara" is on show for the first time in Ireland, as well as the fact that during the week Gabriel Pascal announced his future plans with regard to the filming of Mr. Shaw's plays, may revive a controversy which was started when "Pygmalion" first appeared on the screen. There will be, no doubt, the usual "old-timers" who remember the first production of the play, and insist that all subsequent versions were, are, and will be mere travesties of the original; a few theatre purists who reject the whole thing just because the director in his wisdom decided to omit certain passages which happen to appeal to them, and a few cinema purists who object to the films as such because they are not "good cinema." Yet it is probable that the average run of cinema-goers will find "Major Barbara" highly entertaining, and will wait with interest to hear Mr. Pascal's plans for the future. He intends, according to the report, to start on a programme of no less than eight plays, beginning almost immediately with "Arms and the Man." Among the others which he intends to film within a short time are "Captain Brassbound's Conversion," "The Devil's Disciple," "Saint Joan," "Candida," "Cæsar and Cleopatra," and "Man and Superman." In an interview which is reported in the Daily Telegraph Mr. Pascal enlarges upon his plans. He has selected Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontaine to play in "Captain Brassbound's Conversion," and Rex Harrison—who makes such a success of the part of Cusens in "Major Barbara"—to act the part of Bluntschli in "Arms and the Man," as well as Jack Tanner in "Man and Superman." He did not mention any future plans for Wendy Hiller, who probably was the chief attraction both in "Pygmalion" and in "Major Barbara," but he has chosen Katharine Hepburn to act in "The Millionairess," and—although he refrains from revealing her name—he says that "there is only one young lady" who could play the part of Cleopatra in "Cæsar and Cleopatra."

"Glad Rags"

The melancholy, but true, tale is told of a man who went on a month's cruise. Unconscious of the fact that the ship might have a laundry, but deeply concerned about the social importance of dressing every night for dinner, he saddled himself with a load of dress shirts that occupied as much wardrobe space as the rest of his clothes put together. Many of the shirts never have been worn; many of them never will be worn by their original purchaser; for, alas, the girth of his neck is increasing. Dress shirts are not in great demand to-day. While the emergency lasts it is regarded as slightly unfitting to don "glad rags" except under extreme provocation. Annual dinners that used to bring out a proud array of white bows at the top table and an assortment of white and black at the subsidiary tables have become "suppers" or "teas," or disappeared completely from the list of engagements. Even dressing for the theatre, which does not do a button of harm to the nation or anyone else, has become rare rather than regular. Apparently the only thing against evening dress is that it "looks rich" and creates the impression that the wearer is spending a lot of money which might better be devoted to some sort of patriotic purpose. Actually, of course, the day has long since passed away when the dress suit was the prerogative of any particular branch of society. With the spread of cheap or "economic" tailoring, and the rising of the palais de danse, the dress suit became as important a part of the mechanic's wardrobe as it was of the marquess's. D. H. Lawrence, in one of his books, is almost bitter about the subject. It hardly seems logical that the dress suit should be slightly in disfavour in this country, while the most gorgeous shirts, shoes, flannels, sports coats and jumpers may be worn without a solitary protest that they look rich, reckless or over-ripe. In the meantime, the man with all the shirts is praying for a speedy return of the good old days when there were dances or dinners or some sort of celebrations that justified him in dressing, as the saying has it, every night in the week; praying that he will have some excuse for wearing at least a few of his thirty-odd shirts before his neck gets too big for them.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
SUNDAY NIGHT.

WHEN Mr. Churchill makes his expected broadcast statement shortly there is no doubt that he will be able to add many details of his meeting with President Roosevelt in amplification of the somewhat formal broadcast of Mr. Attlee last Thursday. A review of the general war situation will be left for a statement in the House of Commons after the summer recess. In the meantime, communications are taking place between London and Washington concerning the three-Power conference to be held in Moscow to discuss the Russian war needs in the way of aeroplanes, tanks, munitions and raw materials. Mr. Eden, the Foreign Secretary, and Lord Beaverbrook, the Minister of Supply, are mentioned as the probable British representatives, while Mr. Harry Hopkins, who made a personal survey of the war position on behalf of Mr. Roosevelt, may be one of the representatives of the United States.

Communal Life

Hundreds of Londoners will soon be keeping the first anniversary of taking up their nightly abode in shelters, in the tubes, and basements of big London buildings. A Council official stated yesterday that there are still a number of apparent permanencies in the shelters of Westminster, and they provide one of the phenomena of war-time London. It has been found that these people are roughly divided into two schools, one being of those who appreciate the absence of the noise attending air raids, and the other of those who have come to enjoy the social atmosphere of the shelters. It is said that quite a number of these people carry all their possessions in bags and live almost a communal existence, sleeping in shelters, feeding at communal centres, washing in public lavatories, and engaging in little activity other than for their necessary shopping.

Health Problems

The British Medical Association and the different medical colleges and the Scottish medical corporations are uniting in an examination of the British medical situation in preparation for the after-war reorganisation which will be carried out by seventy medical men. A number of schemes have been submitted to this body and are under examination by various committees. These include an extension of the National Health Insurance to cover all persons in the same income groups and their dependents, provision of a whole-time State salaried medical service, and a very big scheme of hospital development. A number of interim reports have already been prepared, but it is unlikely that they will see the light this year.

The Black-out

Since the alteration of the clocks in Britain last Sunday there have been many breaches of the black-out regulations by people who have overlooked the necessity for obscuring their lights an hour earlier than during the period of double summer-time. Offences have been so numerous that it is suggested that the penalties for infringement of the regulations should be increased. The maximum fine for infringement of the black-out regulations is £100, but in most cases first offenders are let off with fines of forty shillings or so where reasonable explanations are given concerning the oversight.

Gas Masks

Checking the gas masks in the possession of the residents and staffs of the hotels, which has been in progress for a week, was completed yesterday, and it was quite an extensive operation, since many large hotels, such as those in the Piccadilly and Mayfair districts, are situated within the area. The wardens responsible for the checking found that numerous respirators needed attention; some were torn or incomplete or were quite the wrong size, and it appeared as though some people had lost their original respirators and had by some means been provided with others which were of the wrong size. Most of the people who had lost their masks were those who had been long resident in London, and few of the recent arrivals, who included a number of travellers from distant parts of the world, had failed to take care of the respirators with which they were provided on arrival in Britain.

Goats' Meat

Since the beginning of the rationing of meat in Britain, Irish products have been of the greatest assistance in augmenting supplies from other sources, and after the temporary stoppage it is expected that there will be an increasing trade in sausages, brawn and pressed beef, since the British market is able to take large quantities of these products. In addition to beef and pork products from Eire, caterers, clubs, butchers, canteen managers and others in the food industry are now being offered Irish goats' meat. This is in cold storage, and is to be available in boxes of fifty pounds and a hundred pounds each. On account of the limited supply available, the trade in Irish goats' flesh is not capable of so great an expansion as in the case of pork or beef, but possibly the market will be sufficient to prove remunerative to goat-keepers.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

P. J. Ruttledge

I hear that there is genuine and widespread regret among Parliamentary and Civil Service people over the exit of Mr. Ruttledge. In the minds of most people who know "P. J.," his undoubted capacity for affairs seems to be hopelessly overwhelmed by the recollection of his personal charm and manners.

He is regarded everywhere as "a gentleman," a title that is by no means easy to earn or live up to. Far from being lost, his temper has never been known to have been ruffled, even in the heat and hurly-burly of Dail Eireann. Of whom else can that be said?

It is no secret that he has been seeking a way out of the political arena for a few years past, and hankering for the "retirement" of legal practice. Now that he has got his way, I hope that he will not be forsaken by the luck which has deservedly attended his activities in a certain other field.

White Bread and Strong Tea

White bread and strong tea are obtainable at normal prices in many parts of the country, judging by the experience of a Dublin friend of mine who has just completed a touring holiday in the South and West of Ireland.

In each hotel he stayed in—and they numbered over a dozen—the tea was invariably stronger than that served in private houses and cafés in Dublin. As often as not he got white bread, which was served as a matter of course, and not as a special treat, as is now the (rare) case in the capital.

When he murmured something about how was it done, he was always told that it was due to supplies having been laid in. So apparently we in the capital are rather backward as far as laying in supplies goes—or is it that we are afraid of using them up too quickly?

My friend wishes, however, that supplies of cigarettes could have been laid in in a similar fashion. He found it almost impossible to get them. In one shop the assistant said she was so short that she could let him have only half a twenty packet. She then took out ten cigarettes and handed them over.

"They felt much more that way," my friend comments, "but they went quicker than ever."

Boom in Burglaries

When I dropped in on some suburban friends a few nights ago I found the household discussing a burglary of the previous night, which had accounted for the disappearance of a valuable ring.

Just on supper time a member of the local Garda appeared, and, it being an Irish household, he joined the family in a cup of tea.

Subsequently he warned all present never to leave a house unoccupied with any of its windows open, for there was at the moment a spate of burglaries. Our friend ascribed it to the attraction of the cinema, assuring us that modern youth had "gone mad" about films. This was unanimously agreed to by the company present.

He then recounted for us the history of a fifteen-year-old pair of hands recently caught emptying gas-meters. Their owner had adopted the practice of knocking at houses, and, upon receiving an answer, would promptly ask the time! No answer, of course, meant nobody at home, which was just too bad for the gas-meter!

Circus Life in the Emergency

Nobody, I imagine, knows the roads of Ireland so well as the men of our travelling circuses. Now is the zenith of their season, and two long-established shows are touring the country at the present time.

I was chatting at leisure to the manager of one of these the other day. The big marquee had gone up on the fair green; the first afternoon show was about to begin, and nearly a hundred piebald and show horses browsed around the canvas, making, together with a few sleeping "hands," a picturesque background for our conversation.

I learned from this veteran showman that the present war had precipitated a crisis among continental circuses, from which acrobatic and equestrian talent is drawn for performances in these islands. The adult show people, he explained, would soon all be exterminated in the wars, and it would take at least ten years "for the young 'uns to learn."

Our Government regards travelling circuses as important employers of labour, and I understand that because of the high figure paid out each week in wages they receive a most impressive petrol ration, which, of course, is essential for working that motorised column of gaily-painted wagons that form an advance guard for the horse-drawn caravans and lorries.

Odessa

With the menace of occupation now besetting Odessa, I am thinking (writes a correspondent) of the years when one of a small colony of Irishmen living in it was Captain Daniel McNabb, a Co. Down man, who filled the post of British Consul.

That was in the 'seventies, when the city was witnessing the growth of its great export trade in grain. Contemporary with the expansion of its oversea commerce began the laying-out of its wide boulevards, avenues and public parks, and the erection of suburban dwellings, designed by eminent French architects. The population then was a little over a hundred and fifty thousand; now it is four hundred and sixty thousand.

But, with the revolutionary fighting from 1917 to 1920, Odessa suffered enormous injury. More than half its suburbs were laid in ruins, and the famine that followed in 1921 exacted a heavy death-toll among the populace.

Though the Soviet Government has spent large sums on the improvement of the harbour and building new quays and docks, the prosperity of the port is not up to the mark of pre-war times.

TURF FROM DONEGAL

SECOND CARGO IN DUBLIN

Another big cargo of turf from Donegal arrived on Saturday last at Alexandra quay, Dublin, aboard the motor vessel Kerlogue. The load consisted of 300 tons, and was the second to arrive within a fortnight.

Captain Neil Gillespie said that they had made the journey without losing a sod of turf, although when they started there was a strong wind blowing. Some of the turf had been secured around the decks by means of netting.

Mr. T. McLaughlin, general manager of Fuel Importers (Eire), Ltd., who are the consignees, was at the quayside while the turf was being unloaded. The cargo is being stored at the North Wall with that which arrived on the Edenvale.

RUSH FOR THE LAST 'BUS

If a crowd of would-be travellers assemble at a city terminus at 10.30 and the last 'bus goes at 11 o'clock, allowing each 'bus leaving for the suburbs within that period two minutes to take on and pull out with fifty passengers, it is reasonable that if the crowd exceeds 750 the excess will walk home. Up to 10,000 Dublin people as a settled routine go to the pictures on Sunday night, and last night cinemas, to meet the curtailed 'bus services, began their presentations earlier and timed them to end at 10.30. The "after the pictures" rush, however, was of such dimensions, and so many persons were still waiting as late as 11.20 at city termini—believing, apparently, that there is always a last 'bus after the last, that it might be advisable to end the cinema performances still earlier on future Sundays.

BRITISH WOMEN TO BE MOBILISED

WAR SECRETARY'S HINT

The mobilisation of Britain's woman-power on a much vaster scale than ever before was hinted at by Captain David Margesson, British Secretary of State for War, at Newcastle-on-Tyne on Saturday. The country, he said, needed 100,000 women for the Services at once.

The War Minister, who was speaking at a demonstration of the fighting Services, pointed out that Germany had infinitely greater man-power to draw upon than Britain and that women had been used only to a limited extent to make good the shortage. "The experiment has proved a success, and now, with your help, we are determined to expand it," he said. "More women will be needed later on. We are not playing at war—we are at war. We are fighting to obtain that final, crushing victory in the shortest possible space of time."

MR. HORE-BELISHA, M.P., IN KILLARNEY

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

KILLARNEY, Sunday.

Mr. Leslie Hore-Belisha, M.P., former British War Secretary, and Colonel Arthur Evans, M.P., arrived at Killarney from Dublin on Saturday night. They are staying at Kenmare House as the guests of Viscount Castlerosse. This morning the party went on a sightseeing tour, and paid a visit to the golf links, which Mr. Hore-Belisha described as the most beautifully situated in the world. The scenery around here is perfect, he said.

Asked what impressed him most about Eire, he said it was the beauty of the country. He showed a deep interest in Eire and its people, and said he was anxious to learn all he could about both during his stay. To-morrow at Kenmare House he, Colonel Evans and Viscount Castlerosse will lunch with Mr. D. Gray, the American Minister to Ireland, who is visiting Killarney.

COMMUNITY KITCHENS—VIII.

THE MOUNT STREET METHOD

Linking Town and Country

By an "Irish Times" Special Commissioner.

WHILE the Mount Street Club is neither an "emergency" organisation nor, essentially, a communal kitchen, it is making a direct contribution to the problem which we have been considering in this series of articles.

The club was formed to provide a centre where unemployed men might exchange their labour for goods—no money passes. If a member does some work in the club he is paid in tallies—tallies which can only be "cashed" in the club's shop for goods or services produced by other members. The scope of this system will be appreciated when I tell you that about a quarter of a million tallies were issued last year.

One of the club's most important activities is the operation of its farm at Larkfield, Clondalkin, which has been the subject of comment in this newspaper on more than one occasion, and its allotments. The agricultural produce from the land worked by the club goes to feed the club's members and their families. A man may "purchase" supplies for his family by means of tallies (which he has earned) in the club shop.

Mutton is raised at the Larkfield farm, too, and, therefore, the Mount Street Club kitchen is in a position to feed its members with both vegetables and meat without going outside its own organisation. Now this is important, because it is the only organisation in the country which is in a position to do this at the present time. Some community kitchens may be able to keep themselves in vegetables, but they must purchase their meat in the market; the Mount Street club can use its "home-produced" meat, and, incidentally, they exchange the bones from the meat they kill for meat meal or bone manure, so that nothing is wasted.

FOOD AND TURF

Officials told me that there may be a slight surplus of produce from the farm and allotments, and I understand that consideration will be given to the possibility of passing any vegetables, above the needs of the members, along to community kitchens at cost price. This would appear to be an admirable idea, and it is a pity that the surplus will not be large. Of course, given a bigger farm the club could produce still more of the essentials of life, but a bigger farm would need more money by way of a start, and—like many other bodies—the club does not find ready cash easy to get.

Apart from work on the club premises and on the farm and allotments, the club has members cutting turf on a bog at Lullymore. In each of these centres—Mount Street, Larkfield and Lullymore—the men have had to be fed, and the average number of meals provided in recent weeks has been about 4,000 per week. This means that considerable experience has been gained in catering for community kitchens.

There is, as you will appreciate, no suggestion of "charity" about the club. If a man works he gets his tallies. Therefore, if he works, he eats—and so does his family.

From the broader point of view one can see the value of the club as a direct link between the farm and the community kitchen in the city—the kitchen consuming the produce of the farm. A development of this scheme would lead, undoubtedly, to a cutting in the cost of the operations of community kitchens and, consequently, a lowering in the price of the meals to the purchasers.

CO-OPERATION

This thought leads, naturally, to a consideration of whether the Mount Street method could be applied on a very large scale, or whether any other system could be devised to link up the producers in the country with the consumers in the community kitchens. What are your views? It suggests, too, the possibility of a close link between Parish Kitchens in Dublin (or any other large centre of population for that matter) and the work of Muintir na Tire in the country. Originally, I think, Father John Hayes, the founder of Muintir na Tire, contemplated a system of city "guilds" which in various ways, would assist the rural Parish Councils to do their best work; present-day conditions have made the town and country more inter-dependent than ever, and an alliance between a consumer-body in Dublin and a producer-body in a rural area should be beneficial to both.

Under emergency conditions, of course, transport might present a difficulty, and, therefore it might be necessary for the consumer-body to be very close to its producer counter-part; but from my discussions with people who have given careful thought to the question of community kitchens and their lines of supply I feel that this angle should be given very close attention.

If kitchens are to be self-supporting they must get their supplies as cheaply as possible—where they cannot produce themselves—and a close link between the urban and rural population will assist this and help towards a better understanding of the other fellow's point of view by the townsman and his cousins in the country.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

COMMUNITY KITCHENS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—As a result of reading your informative and striking articles on Community Kitchens, I am sending you enclosed cheque for £10, which I want you to kindly hand over to the gallant ladies of Ringsend as my tribute to their courage in starting a kitchen undeterred by the fact that they lacked the backing of any organised society. I was especially glad to notice that all denominations were taking part in the movement.—Yours, etc.,

PETROL FOR DOCTORS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES

SIR,—Letters have appeared in the Press, mostly anonymous, opposing the claims of doctors to extra petrol. Most of these letters bear evidence of complete ignorance of the subject and some clearly display evidence of petty spite. One luminary inquired if patients are the victims and have died through lack of medical attention, why the complaints about lack of petrol come from the doctors and not the patients. Lack of pages in the papers and the scarcity of news would, surely, be forgotten if letters from corpses appeared in the daily Press. Nearly every Board of Health in Ireland, whose responsibility it is to ensure prompt and efficient treatment of the sick poor, has requisitioned more petrol for doctors. The Irish Medical Union has called attention repeatedly to the fact that some are dying through delays in doctors reaching their patients, and others are remaining for hours in agony awaiting relief. It is true that doctors get sufficient petrol to travel about 200 miles per month. This seems adequate to some of your correspondents. The above allowance gives him sufficient petrol to travel seven miles per day or to visit one patient 3½ miles away from his residence. Now, any reasonable person with any knowledge of the average doctor's day knows that such an allowance is absurd and that patients in many cases must have their sufferings prolonged for hours through the doctor being delayed in reaching them, and that in come cases patients die through late attention.

There is one midwife to each dispensary district. She must attend most, if not all, maternity cases. No one suggests that the present allowance of eight gallons a month is too much for such work. There are at least two clergymen to every dispensary district who must attend all the adults who are dying or seriously ill, in addition to other duties—no one would suggest that an allowance of eight gallons per month is excessive in their case. There is one dispensary doctor to each dispensary district. He attends most of the maternity cases; he attends patients of every religion; he must attend all cases, serious or otherwise, and he must pay frequent visits to all; he must attend infants, children, juveniles, as well as adults. Can any impartial person hold that eight gallons a month is reasonable in his case? A doctor is allowed sufficient petrol to attend one call per day three and a half miles from his residence. As his average daily mileage is about twenty miles, he is forced to cycle or horse transport for more than half the month, and as a result he sees patients very much later and less frequently. It stands to reason that many persons must have died through late attendance and some through lack of proper attention. In cases such as diphtheria the amazing difference in the death rates between those attended on the first day of the disease and those attended on the third or fourth day is startling. In cases of external or concealed hemorrhage—minutes make the difference between life and death.

At least four persons have died in each administration area since last January through insufficient petrol allowance to doctors. Those hundred corpses cannot speak; but are we to have another hundred?

There are not a great many doctors in Ireland—a very slight economy in the petrol used by the Government, by the Army, Post Office and E.S.B. would meet the deficiency.

Public services could, and should, be used far more for the conveyance of Army stores and personnel. The E.S.B. could, and should, do likewise. Horse transport suffices for the Post Office in Cork, and should suffice for Dublin during the emergency.

Let all those services slow down; let all those services face a little bother rather than that hundreds of people should face hours of agony for want of relief and that many persons should die through lack of skilled attention.—Yours, etc.,

T. F. O'Higgins, T.D.

SWALLOWS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Has anyone noticed in other parts of Ireland the absence of swallows this year? I had not noticed the fact at first until I received a letter from England to know if I had noticed it, and certainly I have seen none since in this locality. If it is general, I wonder what the cause can be. My only suggestion is that the gunfire in Northern Africa may have diverted the birds elsewhere at the time of their migration, though I confess this does not impress me much.

Yours, etc.,

H. Chavasse.

President and Premier Alone

Historic Meeting Filmed

A FILM of the historic meeting between Mr. Winston Churchill and President Roosevelt, which took place "somewhere at sea," was flown to Britain, and shown privately, without cuts, to a large gathering of journalists in London yesterday.

It does not show the two statesmen in actual conference, but a naval officer, who accompanied the party, stated that during the greater part of the time President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill talked alone. These private talks took place in a cabin on the upper deck of an American cruiser, where the President had his quarters. The conferences between the heads of the various Services of both America and Great Britain went on day after day, sometimes in the Prince of Wales, and sometimes in the American ships.

The sound track was cut out from the picture shown last night, and, apart from the singing of the hymns at the Service held on board the Prince of Wales, the only words heard were those when the President and Mr. Churchill first met.

It is an impressive sight, with the crew of the Prince of Wales massed on board between the great guns, and the President and Mr. Churchill seated side by side, all taking part in a simple religious Service.

A HAPPY REUNION

This was the only occasion on which the President visited the Prince of Wales. About 11 o'clock on the Sunday morning he went aboard. There was a happy reunion. The President's two sons happened to be on duty in the neighbourhood. One is a captain in the Air Reserve, and the other was serving in one of the American destroyers. They were invited aboard the Prince of Wales, and throughout the day acted as A.D.C.s to their father. After the Church Service the President was entertained to luncheon, which was attended by the heads of the departments of both the British and American Services. The President had arrived in one of the American destroyers.

The picture, writes a P.A. reporter, also shows the boys of the Prince of Wales and 200 American sailors who had been invited on board fraternising. The Americans brought boxes of cigarettes, fruit and cheese, with cards signed by the President.

One night twelve officers from the American ships were entertained in the wardroom of the Prince of Wales.

Mr. Churchill arrived at the scene of the meeting, which took place in a bay quite near to shore, with the Chiefs of the Imperial General Staff, the Chief of the Naval Staff and the Vice-Chief of the Air Service.

MESSAGE FROM THE KING

Sir Alexander Cadogan, Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and Mr. Harry Hopkins had also accompanied the Prime Minister. Mr. Churchill immediately went aboard the President's ship, and his first act was to hand him the personal message from the King. Mr. Churchill, in doing so, said:—"I have the honour, Mr. President, to hand you a letter from His Majesty the King."

Mr. Churchill lunched on board with the President, and the talks began without any delay. For the greater part of the day, Mr. Churchill and the President were alone in deep consultation, while the Chiefs of Staff got "down to business" with their opposite numbers. Mr. Churchill also dined with Mr. Roosevelt that night. From then on the conferences continued without any break, and, in the midst of them the film shows the arrival of Lord Beaverbrook. He is seen at times pacing the decks with the Prime Minister and Mr. Hopkins and members of the Staffs.

Nothing can be said as to the exact period over which the conference took place, but they were certainly over two days.

FILM CRITICISED

An Associated Press New York message says that in preparing the film for release to American cinemas the film-cutting editors found that only 200 feet of the 2,000 were usable and that of the 200 feet parts were "off centre, out of focus or under-speed."

The Associated Press was informed in London that the Ministry of Information had no direct official connection with the undertaking to film the historic meeting.

So far as was known the only films yet available in the U.S. were, in fact, made by amateurs. Representatives of the professional news film agencies, working under the egis of the News Reel Association in co-operation with the Ministry, had been present, but it was thought that their films were not yet available for distribution in America.

PRESIDENT WANTED SECRECY

This U.S. film criticism follows some dissatisfaction in the U.S. newspaper circles that only British journalists were present at the meeting. But the Balitome Sun, in a despatch from London by its publisher, Mr. Paul Patterson, threw a different light on the matter, stating that President Roosevelt himself was not prepared for extensive publicity and had kept his own plans secret even from his Secretariat. He, therefore, received unfavourably the appearance of the three British journalists who accompanied the British party, the despatch said.

They then asked him, if that were the case, to postpone the Bill until a special meeting of the Trade Union Congress had considered it, but this was refused.

Mr. Lynch said Order 83, which prevents workers from getting wage increases, was made in the interests of one section of the community—the employing class. It was an instrument of class warfare. The Government was putting into power a "mean, petty, Gaelic bourgeois."

Miss McCaffrey, Irish Women Workers' Union, said no one had given the Government a mandate to pass such legislation. Labour had helped the country to maintain neutrality, but the present legislation was being passed for the purpose of penalising Labour.

Mrs. R. Carpenter and Mr. J. Larkin also spoke. Mr. E. Tucker presided.

WHERE WILL THE GERMAN ARMY WINTER?

RUSSIAN FORCES ARE STILL FORMIDABLE

By Our Military Correspondent.

THE special German summary of August 6th gave us a sort of skeleton order of battle of their forces in Russia, as during the earlier stages of their offensive. It has probably been considerably modified recently in details. According to this disposition, they have, in effect, three groups of armies, corresponding fairly closely to the Russian three. In the north, confronting Voroshiloff, was Leeb with two armies and one armoured group. This last formation was commanded by Hoeppner, and operated on the Porkhov-Pskoff sector: it was followed by the army of Busch. The other army of this group was commanded by Kuechler, and had advanced across Latvia into Esthonia.

The centre group, facing Timoshenko, was commanded by Bock, and was appreciably stronger than the other. It comprised three armies—those of Kluge, Strauss and Weichs—and two armoured groups—those of Hoth and Guderian. There has been a report that this last-named general officer has been killed. If true, this means a serious loss, because he was the originator and best exponent of present-day German Panzer doctrine.

MINOR GROUPS

The southern group—i.e., Rundstedt's-faced Budenny. Like Leeb's, it consisted of two armies—Reichenau and Stuelpnagel—and the armoured group of Kleist. It is to be assumed that Rundstedt had also the Rumanian Army under his direct command. The less numerous Hungarian and Slovak contingents would, of course, be incorporated in one or other German Army. The Finns, on the very extreme left flank, appear to be operating on their own—in co-operation with Leeb.

The numbers, it will be seen, are certainly vast—nine armies in all, plus four armoured groups. What the strength of these last would be we have no means of knowing exactly. No doubt, they would vary according to the task assigned so many armoured divisions, as required. Of actual personnel an armoured division has less than the ordinary type—some 12,000 men, with 400 odd tanks.

AIR FORCES

What strength of Luftwaffe has been assigned to the Russian front has nowhere been indicated, not even approximately. Judging by the marked absence of activitey in other theatres it must form a very high percentage of the total. At all events, it will be seen that—counting all corps and services in—the four-million figure for Axis totals is not so wild an exaggeration after all.

It is likely that the Southern group—on the Ukraine front—has been reinforced, perhaps by transfer from one of the others even. It is natural now to direct the striking point of the offensive into the Ukraine. Apart from any question of local objectives, there is the important matter of longer campaignable weather. It has to be realised that Leningrad is about a thousand miles further north than Moscow. Possibly, if it were assumed that an additional month might be expected, it would be near the mark. But there would be nothing hard and fast about it. Ankara, by the way, gives Rundstedt 70 divisions.

WINTER HALT

Just how far inside Russia are the Germans likely to halt for the winter? This is a most important question, and in attempting to solve it one may be permitted to refer back to a quotation some weeks ago in these notes from General Bernhardi: "For Germany it would be always a question of a limited offensive only, where from the outset the defensive must be kept in view." This does not quite fit the present circumstances, but it will do for a start. At all events, there is an obvious position that meets it exactly—the almost continuous water-line of the Dwina and Dnieper from Riga to Kherson. This was practically the old, historical eastern frontier of the Polish kingdom in its heyday—indeed, the natural frontier towards the East. This line, however, will not serve now—for two reasons. It has already been largely passed in the northern sectors, and it does not give the Germans very much of what they invaded Russia to obtain.

THE 1918 LINE

The next line to consider is the 1918 line—i.e., Narva-Pskoff-Mohilav-Khartow-Azov—with the Finns occupying their own territory. This corresponds fairly accurately to the present front, as far as the northern portion is concerned. In the southern part, however, the present front is some 200-300 miles short of the line in question. Moreover, in 1918 the Austro-Germans commanded the sea, which is not the case to-day. Besides, this is not in any sense a natural line or position. It was only possible to hold it on the former occasion because the Russians had ceased to be an effective force. Even so, it does not really give Germany control of Russian raw materials—especially oil. Also it leaves quite intact the major portion of the country's war industry—although, it is true, within air-raid distance to a considerable extent.

FURTHER EAST

The third line that has been mentioned is certainly a geographical entity, and, if held, it certainly would largely—though not at all completely—curtail the output of Russian war-industry. But it is very remote—entailing a further eastward advance of several hundreds of miles. The line in qustion is that beginning at Lake Ladoga and following the Volga to Astrakhan. The Volga is about 2,300 miles in length, so that the magnitude of the problem is manifest. Conceivably the Germans will decide on a compromise between the first and second lines indicated—i.e., a line from Pskov to Mohilev, and thence along the Dnieper to the Black Sea. This assumes the continued maintenance "in being" of the Russian armies, which there is no reason to doubt will be the case.

THE UKRAINE

Regarding the Ukraine fighting, the position seems to be the following. Along the northern half of the front—i.e., due west of Kiev and southward from the Pripet marshes—the Russians held fast: the taking of Korosten was merely a local success. Further south, however, the Germans eventually made headway—and turned towards the Black Sea coast rather than towards Kiev. In so doing they have over-run much valuable agricultural land and occupied an iron-producing district. This last they scarcely needed, but it entails a certain loss to the Russians. They have also inflicted severe losses in men and material on the Russian armies of the Budienny group—no doubt, at an appreciable cost to themselves. The Russians will now, presumably, fall back east of the Dnieper, except at a few points. They may also decide to leave garrisons in Odessa and Nikolaiev, after the Tobruk pattern. Coupled with their superiority at sea this would a valuable diversion.

IN THE BALTIC

On their Baltic Sea flank the Russian situation is much better than might have been expected. They still hold the vital Islands of Desel and Dagoe, the naval base of Reval (Tallinn) with Baltic Port and an extensive zone of hinterland. Opposite, they hold Hangoe and all the most important islands in the Gulf of Finland. The penetration to the seashore near Taps by some of Kuechler's troops would seem to be a minor raid only. At all events, the main effort of the Leeb group seems to be in the Lake Ilmen region, hundreds of miles inland.

It may be that Leeb is now aiming to cut the Leningrad-Moscow railway, and Bock is air-raiding the lines southward from Moscow. It is reasonable to suppose efforts to break up these lateral communications of the Russians and generally, to try and accentuate material damage to the latter. Heavy blows have, unquestionably, been struck at the Russians, resulting in considerable losses of men and material. They have not, however, been deprived of any vital supplies, and should certainly be quite as formidable as ever by next April.

L.D.F. RIFLE CONTESTS

MR. de VALERA AND MINISTERS ATTEND

YESTERDAY Mr. de Valera watched 150 L.D.F. marksmen from the twenty-six counties, and four county boroughs, compete at the Curragh Camp for the Irish National Championship in the Miniature Rifle contest (Irish Press Cup) and the Iveagh Perpetual Challenge Cup for service rifles.

Mr. de Valera was accompanied by Mr. Frank Aiken, Minister for the Co-Ordination of Defensive Measures; Mr. Oscar Traynor, Minister for Defence; Lieutenant-General McKenna, Chief of Staff, and Colonel O'Flynn. They were met on their arrival at the camp by Colonel T. McNally, Officer Commanding, and a guard of honour under Section Leader Broadbent.

An Taoiseach and the Ministers then inspected the scoring board, and later visited the rifle ranges, where they were received by Colonel Hogan and Colonel Gilheaney. Colonel M. Wedick was in charge of the firing arrangements.

While the contest was going on a lone competitor from Sligo, P. J. Hanly, who had missed the train, arrived just in the nick of time and was able to compete.

CHAMPIONSHIP GOES TO WICKLOW

The Miniature Rifle Championship contest was won by F. Anderson (20), a garage worker, of Glenaly, Wicklow, with a score of 93 points. N. L. Plumann (24), a farmer's son, of Woodstock House, Athy, was second with 90 points, and F. Foley (21), an E.S.B. electrician, of Tramore, was third with 89 points. Each of the three are county champions.

MONAGHAN WINS TEAM CONTEST

The service rifle competition, for the Perpetual Challenge Cup presented by the Earl of Iveagh—a team contest—was won by County Monaghan with 207 points. Limerick City, with 205 points, were second and Dublin County, with 203 points, third. In this competition the highest possible score any individual member of a team could register was 45 points, and the following seven competitors reached this maximum:—

D. Russell (Cork County), G. Treacy (Dublin County), K. Kelly (Kildare), W. Green (Limerick), J. Barrett (Tipperary), P. Mullane (Waterford), and A. Kenny (Wexford).

In presenting the trophies—the championship cup and the Iveagh Cup, also thirty miniature rifles—to the winners, Mr. Traynor, the Minister for Defence, paid tribute to the extraordinary superior standard of the shooting at the ranges, both at 25 yards, 100 yards and 200 yards.

STUDENT KILLED ON LONE CLIMB

Thomas Alan Glyn Jones, a 19 years old medical student of Sheffield, fell to his death while attempting to climb an 800-feet-high mountain crag in North Wales. His body was recovered yesterday. When his two companions declined to attempt the Cash Crag he set out alone, arranging to meet the others at the summit, but when they got there Jones could not be seen.

BRITISH INSTITUTE IN MADRID

DR. STARKIE TELLS OF ITS WORK

The success of the British Institute in Madrid, in its less than twelve months of existence, was outlined to an Irish Times reporter yesterday by its founder, Dr. Walter Starkie, of Trinity College, Dublin. Dr. Starkie was asked by the British Council last year to found a British Institute in Madrid, with the object of strengthening cultural ties between Britain and Spain, and he said yesterday that the success of the new Institute has been great. He has returned to Dublin for a holiday.

Most of the 220 members of the British Institute in Madrid are Spaniards, and the activities of the Institute include a school with about 45 children, musical concerts somewhat on the Royal Dublin Society model, lectures on almost every subject, including the drama, medicine, science, art, literature and religious subjects; classes for those intending to take up diplomatic service, and various language classes. The classes do not cost the pupils much, and are attended by members of all classes, which is the intention of the Institute.

Dr. Starkie.

Dr. Starkie said that the Spanish people are generally conscious of a strong historical and religious bond with Ireland, and show the greatest interest in Irish affairs. His lecture on the Abbey Theatre was very popular. The chaplain of the Institute is an Irish priest, the Rev. Father Mulrean, a native of Westmeath, who says Mass in the little chapel attached to the Institute. A member of Dr. Starkie's staff, Miss Pedoroso, is a descendant of an Irish family, her uncle, Count Cañongo, owner of the house in which the Institute at present is, being a direct descendant of the O'Sullivan Beare family.

Dr. Starkie expressed the greatest satisfaction with the staff of teachers at the Institute, each of whom is a First Honours graduate of Oxford, Cambridge or Dublin. One of them is a Miss Jackson, who also is of Irish descent.

CHILD WELFARE

The interest of the Institute in children is particularly strong, and, apart from the school, a good deal of child welfare work is carried on, flour being distributed and medical services supplied. The American Red Cross has helped with gifts of flour. A special doctor is engaged to look after the children in the school at the Institute.

The Institute has interested the Spanish Government, and the Bishop of Madrid and its Irish founder is already well known in Spain, where a very large number of families have some Irish connection. The lecturers at the Institute have included many famous men, one of the most recent visiting lecturers being Sir Samuel Hoare. Other lecturers have been the American Ambassador, the Rev. Father Heras, S.J., and the Provincial of the Augustinian Order. Among those attending the lectures are clerks, workers and soldiers, while the library of English books, reviews and periodicals is well patronised.

Dr. Starkie is "on loan" from Trinity College to the British Council, under which the Institute works, and it is hoped, he said, to found other British Institutes in other Spanish cities—perhaps, Barcelona and Seville.

Asked about conditions in Spain, Dr. Starkie said that the Spaniards were making a tremendous effort to re-build the country after the civil war. The task was an immense one, and it was unfortunate that the world war had come along to hinder it. People from all parts of Europe were passing through Spain on their way to various parts of the world, and in Madrid one met Czechs, Poles, French, Belgians, and many others, which lent a great deal of interest to life in the city.

About fifty more British officers and N.C.O.s, who were sent out of Syria by the French authorities, have now returned to Beirut from Toulon, where they had been held prisoners. A certain number of junior French officers, detained with General Dentz in Jerusalem, will be repatriated in return, but General Dentz and his senior officers will be held until the remaining British prisoners—understood to number about 35—are released.

DEPUTATION TO MINISTERS

STATEMENT IN SENATE CHALLENGED

Mr. Gilbert Lynch, a member of the Irish Trade Union Congress National Executive, told a public meeting held by the Council of Action, Dublin Trades Union Council, at Cathal Brugha street, Dublin, yesterday that the Minister for Industry and Commerce had stated in the Senate that the members of the deputation had been adamant, and had thumped the table. That was wrong. He was on the deputation which met Mr. de Valera and Mr. MacEntee, not as individuals, but as Ministers, and had treated them with the dignity due to them. The only man who thumped the table was, he said, the Minister for Industry and Commerce himself. Mr. de Valera said the Trade Union Bill was being introduced in the interests of the unions.

FROM BOMBED AREA TO ENCAMPMENT

RESPITE FOR DUBLIN CHILDREN

By Our Reporter.

When a city boy of about twelve years of age gets into the country he usually goes wild. If two similar city boys go to the country together they become twice as wild—what is it like, do you think, to be in charge of thirty such boys? The camp commandant of the Red Cross Society's camp for children from the bombed area of Dublin at Avoca, Co. Wicklow, told me all about it the other day.

We sat in his store tent while a dozen or so youngsters a few yards away clustered around a big cauldron and the process of washing-up after tea went on. The camp is being run for the Society by Scouts belonging to the Catholic Boy Scouts of Ireland, eight of whom are in charge, under a commandant.

DECIDED TO REMAIN

The camp was opened at the beginning of last week on Major Bayley's estate at Avoca. The day on which the boys and Scouts arrived was raining hard. Conditions on the next two days were unchanged, and on the third day "I want to go home" became a frequently-heard refrain among the camper boys. The camp commandant took a poll of those who wanted to go home, and brought them back to Dublin.

The large majority of the boys stayed on—and are very glad that they did, for they have been able to bathe, walk, play football, and take advantage of a unique opportunity to get to know the country. In a few days camp life became easy to them and their days were so full of exercise that sleep under canvas seemed no different from that in their own homes. The camp will last until next Friday and most of the youngsters want it to last all summer.

DISCIPLINE

All the worries that assail the average father in the city are shared by these scouts who look after the camping children. The principles of private property and of the ownership of land and the things growing thereon, had early to be instilled, while camp discipline had to be built up from little or nothing. The boys are given a tonic every day, and much hunting was necessary at first to keep up the averages on the parades before the medical tent. Gradually the sense of discipline has been inculcated in the boys, and as the days passed lapses from grace became comparatively rare.

The field in which the camp is situated lies between the Avoca river and the railway line. The camp commandant told me that they bought their food locally, at pretty high prices—twopence-halfpenny per head for cabbage. Cocoa was the main beverage in the camp, and the "kids" were thriving on it.

The British Postmaster-General, Mr. W. S. Morrison, is visiting Northern Ireland to inspect the postal, telegraph and telephone services.

L.D.F. PARADE IN DROGHEDA

From Our Correspondent.

DROGHEDA, Sunday.

Several hundred members of the Local Defence Force from Drogheda and district took part in the parade held here to-day. A contingent from the Maritime Inscription and members of the Local Security Force and of the Irish Red Cross also participated.

The salute was taken by Commandant Vivion de Valera, who was accompanied by Commandant McDonagh, O/C, Eastern Command, L.D.F.; Right Rev. Mgr. E. O'Callaghan, P.P., V.G., St. Peter's, Drogheda; the Very Rev. J. Nulty, P.P., V.G., St. Mary's, Drogheda; District Administrative Officer John Byrne, Alderman L. J. Walsh, T.D., Mayor; Mr. T. J. Branigan, Adjutant; Chief Superintendent M. Fitzgerald, Superintendent J. Dowd, and several others.

The parade was led by District Leader R. McCabe, and the colours were borne by Assistant D.L. T. Clarke. The guard of honour was under the command of Captain Leonard, Julianstown.

MR. T. G. BREWSTER

The death occurred suddenly yesterday, while on holidays at Garryvoe, Co. Cork, of Mr. Theodore G. Brewster, manager, Cork Branch, Independent Newspapers. Mr. Brewster was a son of the late Mr. W. T. Brewster, secretary and manager of Independent Newspapers, Ltd. He served all through the Great War. He was appointed manager of the Cork office in 1919, and was a founder member of the Cork Rotary Club, and at the time of his death was vice-president and honorary secretary. He was also identified with the Cork Children's Fresh Air Fund, the Indigent Roomkeepers' Society, the Munster Branch of the Badminton Union of Ireland, and the Cork Publicity Association. He leaves a widow and three daughters.

Mr. Bernard McGinn, whose first play, "Remembered for Ever," is staged at the Abbey Theatre this week.

MINISTER WAS IMPRESSED

REVIEW OF HOWTH L.S.F.

Mr. Gerald Boland, Minister for Justice, on Saturday, reviewed several hundred members of the Howth L.S.F. The Howth district comprises the Raheny, Coolock, Santry, Finglas, Blanchardstown, Chapelizod, Clonsilla, and Lucan groups. The parade included Red Cross contingents and a section of the auxiliary fire service.

The Minister was received by district staff officers Lord HolmPatrick and D. Finn. In addition, there were present General W. R. E. Murphy, chief superintendent; W. J. Quinn, Bray, and Superintendent M. T. Glynn, Howth.

This was the first time that the new Women's Auxiliary Force and the boy messengers paraded publicly.

The Minister said that the parade was a credit to all concerned. He had been very impressed at the number of young people who had prepared for any emergency. The movement was a most important one for the country, and would leave an impression even when the war was over. He was proud of the Guards for all they had done for the new force.

COMMITTEE TO BE RE-APPOINTED

BELFAST CORPORATION MEETS TO-DAY

From Our Correspondent.

BELFAST, Sunday.

A special meeting of the Belfast Corporation will be held to-morrow on a requisition signed by thirty-three of the sixty members of the City Council. The object of the meeting will be to rescind the resolution passed at the monthly meeting, rejecting the report of the Special Committee, known as the "Big Six," which investigated the findings of the Northern Ministry of Home Affairs upon the inquiry into the non-administration at Whiteabbey Sanatorium. The Home Affairs Ministry took strong exception to this decision, and also the action of the Corporation in discharging the "Big Six" Committee, and threatened to take legislative and administrative action against the Corporation. Faced with this ultimatum, which virtually meant the appointment either of commissioners or a manager over the head of the Corporation, the Lord Mayor, Sir Crawford McCullagh, Bart., held a conference with the other members of the City Council. He pointed out the seriousness of the position, and, as a result, a requisition was signed calling the special meeting for to-morrow. A proposal also will be submitted to increase the membership of the "Big Six" Committee to nine, by the addition of the names of Alderman Duff, Alderman Lyle Hall and Alderman Black. There are indications, however, that this proposal may not prove acceptable, and that the meeting will adopt the report of the "Big Six" Committee and re-appoint the committee without the additional members.

Two German prisoners who escaped from an internment camp in the English Lake District on Saturday night, were recaptured after fourteen hours' liberty. They were found by Home Guards four miles from the camp.

THE ANGLO-IRISH STRUGGLE

HISTORIC LONGFORD BATTLE RECALLED

From Our Correspondent.

LONGFORD, Sunday.

The battle of Clonfin, County Longford, on February 2, 1921, when General Sean MacEoin, T.D., and his column engaged in conflict with British forces, was re-enacted to-day on the site, where exercises and manœuvres were carried out by military and L.D.F. General MacEoin was in attendance with the following, who served with him in that fight:—Colonel Seamus Farrelly, Adjutant Sean Duffy, Captain Seamus Conway, Assistant District Leader M. F. Reynolds, John McDowell, M. Kenny, T. Brady. The Defence Forces were represented by:—Colonel A. T. Lalor, Major Gallagher, Commandant Cooney, Commandant N. Murphy, (former O.C. of the Second Battalion, Longford Brigade), Captain O. MacNeill, Captain Fullam, Captain E. Goggins, Lieutenants Hayes, Ryan and Mahon.

Before the re-staging of the 1921 engagement General MacEoin addressed the gathering. He recalled that in 1921 he was notified by General Michael Collins that preparations by the British forces were complete to launch an immediate offensive on Longford.

Army lorries were in positions on the roadway indicating the positions held by the British forces on that occasion, and L.D.F. parties were placed at the points occupied by General MacEoin's column.

Another Paris announcement said that the Communist, Andre Thellier, had been arrested for having in his possession Communist tracts.

"Hostility to the national revolution" has led to the removal from office of a number of mayors and municipal councillors, according to decrees published in to-day's Official Journal.

Kerry - Galway Final: Dublin Outplayed

(By PAT'O.)

KERRY.......... 2-9 DUBLIN......... 0-5

KERRY and Galway meet in the All-Ireland final at Croke Park on September 7th. Kerry were a rejuvenated team at Tralee yesterday, when they outclassed Dublin. The champions played delightful football; going up high, they fielded beautifully, and their forwards combined well. That goal by O'Connor for Kerry against the wind, at the twentieth minute, was the beginning of the end. Dublin tried hard, and played some passages of attractive football, but they met Kerry at their best and strongest. The attendance totalled 20,000.

Dublin opened with a fast breeze, but Kerry attacked. P. Brosnan swung a fast ball to the fourteen yards marks and Kelly opened with a point from a free. Kennedy saved Dublin's lines and Banks's point from a free set the teams level. Walsh, Keohane, and Healy were mastering the Dublin attack; the Brosnan pair were busy, and Kelly's point from a free recovered the Kerry lead, and another point by Kelly put them two points clear. Falvey sent Dublin up, and O'Connor passed to Joy for a good point. Kerry then took firm control. P. Brosnan drove hard to Kelly, who kicked over his head to the square, where O'Connor dashed in to punch the ball to the net. Dublin raced away, and Banks pointed a free. Half-time:—Kerry, 1 goal 3 points; Dublin, 3 points.

Dublin's backs were busy on the resumption, but the game was as good as over when O'Sullivan crashed a great goal home for Kerry. Points by Sean Brosnan (2) and Kelly (2) gave the champions an unbeatable lead. Dublin played on pluckily, but found Myers, Healy, and Casey safe. O'Keeffe, in goal, was cheered for fine saves when O'Connor and Banks shot balls at him from close range.

Falvey, Kennedy, and Murphy defended well for Dublin; but P. B. Brosnan and O'Gorman added points. Dublin raids were always beaten back, and Kerry won all one way. Their defence was superb.

Kerry—D. O'Keeffe; W. Myers, J. Keohane, T. Healy, W. Dillon, W. Casey, E. Walsh, S. Brosnan, P. Kennedy, W. Walsh, T. O'Connor, P. B. Brosnan, J. Gorman, M. Kelly, C. O'Sullivan.

Dublin—C. Kelly; P. O'Reilly, P. Kennedy, J. Murphy, G. Fitzgerald, M. Falvey, B. Quinn, P. Holly, J. Gibbons, J. Joy, P. Bermingham, T. Banks, J. Counihan, P. O'Connor, M. Fletcher.

CAVAN DISAPPOINT

GALWAY......... 1-12 CAVAN......... 1-4

Galway had a convincing victory over Cavan at Croke Park, leading by three points at half-time (1-4 to 1-1), and closing eight points ahead on the score 1-12 to 1-4. Beaten in speed and fielding, Cavan disappointed, and for the greater part their forwards were outplayed. Had Galway availed of all their chances in the first half they should have won by a wider margin, but their shooting was erratic. Midway through the second half Cavan made a strong effort, but failed to break a sterling Galway defence, ably supported by McGauran in goal.

With the breeze in their favour Galway attacked from the throw in, and had points by Hanniffy and Burke. Under pressure the Cavan backs made a mistake in hand passing, and Galway went through for a goal, fisted by Dunne from a centre by Burke, and Dunne followed with a point. Cavan, attacking from a free by J. J. O'Reilly, had a point by Boylan, but Galway had an easy score when, from a long punt by Mulholland, the ball hopped over the bar. McGauran (Galway goal) saved splendidly from Boylan, but Magee dashed in and punched to the net for a goal for Cavan. Galway were leading by three points at the interval—1-4 to 1-1.

An expected Cavan rally in the second half did not materialise. Galway had points from Canavan (2) Dunne (2) and Hanniffy, while Cavan, playing up with vigour at this stage, had four fruitless "50's." McGauran saved from Magee and Fallon, and a spirited attack by Galway brought a point from Burke. Cavan had a point from a free by Magee, but Galway again took the upper hand, Burke and Connolly sending over points in quick succession. From a stinging shot by Morgan, McGauran saved brilliantly in the Galway goal; but Cavan kept on the pressure, and in a tame finish had points by Conaty and Magee.

MUNSTER HURLING

The Munster Council at Tralee yesterday fixed the Tipperary v. Cork Hurling Championship tie for Cork on 31st August. The winners or Cork, should Tipperary be unable to travel, will meet Limerick on 14th September, at Cork. The winners of this tie will represent Munster in the All-Ireland semi-final, and afterwards meet Tipperary, should they have been unable to play Cork for the Munster Championship.

OTHER RESULTS

Junior Football, semi-final—Leix 4-6, Kerry 3-9.

Leinster Junior Hurling, final—Wexford 5-11, Dublin 2-6.

The Ulster Minor Football final will be played at Corrigan Park, Belfast, on Sunday next.

STOCK EXCHANGE FEATURES

ABSENCE OF NEW LOAN CAUSES SURPRISE

FROM OUR LONDON FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT.

IT is really a good thing that the pronounced optimism noticeable in London Stock Exchange circles a short time ago has been replaced by a more sober atmosphere, for undue optimism is as bad as unwarranted pessimism.

The previous feeling that the war might be over much sooner than was thought possible a few months ago has been modified by the appearance of dark clouds in the Far East and the more rapid progress made by the German forces in the Ukraine.

Against these circumstances can be set the great improvement in the position from the standpoint of Great Britain since the early part of last summer, one aspect of which is the encouraging progress towards supremacy in the air, and another the increasing help given by the U.S.A.

WAITING POLICY

The much firmer tendency displayed by nearly all sections of the "House" on Thursday before Mr. Atlee's broadcast on the meeting of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill was not held on the following day. A slight reaction in Gilt-edged securities indicated that the banks and other big institutional investors had not resumed support of quoted issues following the turning off of the "tap" for 2½ p.c. National War Bonds, and, generally, the disposition of members on Friday appeared to be to await further news from Russia and the Far East.

There was some reaction in the Miscellaneous market, partly owing to profit-taking before the week-end, but a prominent exception was firmness in Shipping issues, which were helped by the figures of the Royal Mail Line's annual report.

The underlying tendency of markets is quite steady, and encouraging war news would probably be quickly followed by a fresh upward movement in prices.

GOVERNMENT FINANCE

The market for existing Government securities should benefit from the withdrawal of 2½ p.c. National War Bonds, 1946-48, as from Thursday evening last. One effect of this development in Government finance was to stimulate the demand for short-dated securities generally and to increase the sales of the bonds before the "tap" was turned off.

For the week ended Tuesday subscriptions to these 2½ p.c. Bonds amounted to over £36,255,000, as compared with only £7,170,000 in the preceding week, and it is probable that purchases were also on a large scale on Wednesday and Thursday. The fact that no announcement has been made of a new issue caused some surprise, but, if the effect is to strengthen the market for Government stocks generally, the circumstances will help any new issue that may be made later on. The Chancellor can, however, afford to await the effect upon sales of the 3 p.c. Savings Bonds—now the only "tap" issue with a market quotation—when 2½ p.c. War Bonds are no longer available at 100.

RECOVERY STOCKS

Although, as stated above, undue optimism is no longer so prevalent in the Stock Exchange a demand is still evident for what are described as "recovery" stocks, these relating chiefly to concerns whose fortunes should greatly improve with the advent of peace.

The demand has been largely for industrial Ordinary shares, prices of which, in some cases, have been raised to a point at which the yield from the last annual dividend is very small. If, however, recovery after the war permitted of an increased dividend, the present quotation, in some instances, might be justified.

Another group to attract speculative attention is that for Argentine Railway stocks, especially the prior charge issues, all of which are heavily depreciated. In this case the demand has been encouraged by favourable traffic returns, most of the lines now showing increases, while on the Buenos Ayres and Pacific the aggregate gain in gross receipts since the 1st July is substantial.

A decided improvement in the fortunes of the British-owned Argentine Railways would certainly justify higher prices for the Pref. and Deb. stocks. Of the latter, the B.A. and Pacific 4 p.c. 1st Deb. commands a price of about 66 so that the prospective yield is 6⅛ p.c. while the similar security of the B.A. Great Southern is quoted at not much under 50 p.c. discount; but B.A. Western and Central Argentine 4 p.c. Deb. stocks are both obtainable at little over 30—a price giving plenty of scope for capital appreciation.

RUSSIAN SECURITIES

The change in the political situation during the last two months has not induced a noticeable demand for Russian Railway Securities, several of which are still quoted on the London Stock Exchange.

For many years now prices have represented no more than option money, simply because there is very little chance of any payment being received by the holders. Russian Guaranteed Railway Bonds of nominally £100 can be obtained for considerably less than 10/-. Thus, the last record of business in the Armavir Touapse Railway 4½ p.c.'s was at 6/3, in the Russian South-Eastern Railway 4½ p.c.'s at 7/6 and in the Troitzk Railway 4½ p.c.'s at 10/-, while the last business in the similar security of the Kokand Namangan Railway was at 2/-, but that was recorded some time before Germany invaded Russia. All these 4½ p.c. Bond issues are, or, rather, were, guaranteed by the Russian Government, and the quoted prices indicate what chance there is that the present Administration will honour an obligation entered into during the Zarist régime.

Quotations of the Russian Government Bonds were removed from the London official list some time ago, but previously they were as nominal a market as the Railway issues. In the past, French investors were largely interested in these Securities.

AN INVESTMENT SUGGESTION

A good many investors find it necessary to secure a bigger return on their money than is promised by the New War Loans. Obviously, purchases made to obtain a considerably higher yield must entail greater risk, but there are numerous Securities which can be regarded as reasonably safe and upon which the return is attractive.

A given amount of money could be spread over, say, half-a-dozen different Securities, not necessarily with a view to greater security of capital, but in order to get a good, average return. A list of this kind could be formed of 3½ p.c. War Loan, the 3½ p.c. Stocks of the Port of London and the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board; London, Midland, and Scottish 4 p.c. (Senior) Pref., London and North-Eastern 4 p.c. 2nd Guar., and Barclays Bank £1 fully-paid Shares. At the current prices the yields on the first three of these Stocks range from about 3⅞ to 3½ p.c., and on the second three from nearly 4½ to fully 6¾ p.c., the average return on the whole amount being a little over 4¾ p.c. It may be noted that only 3½ p.c. War Loan is a Trustee investment.

BANKS' RESOURCES

A further indication of the increase in the resources of the banks is provided by the July statement of the eleven London clearing institutions. This shows that the aggregate deposits have reached the new high record of £2,990,739,000, which is nearly £537,000,000 in excess of the figure for July, 1940. The movement has virtually compelled a further addition to the investments, which now total £902,477,000, thus marking an increase for the year of nearly £245,000,000.

In the same period the bills discounted have diminished by nearly £141,000,000. It is virtually certain that in a short time the aggregate deposits of these eleven banks will reach £3,000,000,000.

This huge expansion in their resources explains the ability of the banks to subscribe heavily to the 2½ p.c. National War Bonds mentioned above, and suggests that they will now probably have to buy 3 p.c. Savings Bonds, the only "tap" security available for the big investor.

THE MONEY MARKET

Turnover in bills was small during the past week, and business remained quiet on Saturday, but it is expected that the banks will resume buying on a larger scale this week. Money has been in short supply, borrowers finding it difficult to obtain fresh loans at under 1 per cent., but usually some ½ per cent. credit against bonds was offered. Conditions were easier on Saturday, with balances offering until to-day at ½ per cent.

Rather surprisingly, in view of the heavy subscriptions to War Bonds, the Treasury will resume borrowing against deposit receipts this week, the amount asked for being £15,000,000; this will be "new money," as there are no maturities.

On Saturday last 111 girls were taken on a week's holiday to Sunshine House, Balbriggan, by the Society of St. Vincent de Paul Sunshine Fund. Already this year 1,172 children—633 boys and 539 girls—have enjoyed a holiday at Sunshine House.

WALL STREET STEADY

COMMITMENTS KEPT LIGHT

NEW YORK, Saturday.

The Stock market to-day was dormant, and the turnover of 120,000 shares was one of the smallest this year. The list was slightly irregular, and, while there was no particular bearishness, there was an inclination to keep commitments light, pending possible further revelations emerging from the Churchill-Roosevelt conference.

The market opened extremely dull and narrow. The rail and utility divisions were featureless. Motors were inactive. Oil shares were motionless, and failed to react to the initial step in petrol rationing. Finance shares were steady on credit proposals being more liberal than anticipated. Steel issues remained on an even keel.

Some quarters believe that the market is possibly oversold. The tone at the close was steady.

A total of 403 stocks was traded—155 advanced, 118 declined, and 130 were unchanged.

The Money market and open market discount rate were unchanged. Sterling exchange remained steady and unchanged at 4.03¼. No official silver price was fixed was fixed in New York to-day.

MANCHESTER MARKETS REVIEW

STEADY TRADE FOR BACON

Activity in all departments of the provision trade is well maintained, with demand for most commodities up to full permitted quantities. No diminution is reported in the call for bacon. Although less home-produced and Canadian is available, and a falling off is experienced for Eirean, supplies have been supplemented by ample releases of United States sides, backs, bellies and hams, the proportion of these meats in the releases being increased in order to maintain the four-ounce ration and distribution on an equable basis. The Ministry has made a reference to this in a notice to the trade. Hams and gammons continue in restricted supply and available for the coupon sale only, no Category C being included. There has been a slight decrease in supplies of pigs allocated to bacon factories.

A steady trade is passing in butter, with available supplies moving readily up to the full ration level, and the fortnightly allocation has been well cleared. Best quality margarine is in good request, and quantities are equal to the increased demand. Stocks of English refined lard are in small compass, but there is a steady call for the releases of American refined lard from wholesalers, which is now being distributed against the cooking fats ration. This is expected to be available to the public next week. In cheese the position remains very firm, and a steady movement into consumption is reported, the increased ration quantities being awaited next week. Eggs continue firm and in good demand, and there is a seasonal scarcity. The weekly distribution is now proceeding, and is on the basis of one egg per person in most districts.

MORE FAT CATTLE

At Mode Wheel, the Government collecting centre under the control scheme, rather more fat cattle was entered than usual of late, and the standard of quality was higher than for some weeks past. A small number of calves were also received. Rather shorter arrivals of pigs were available at the Water Street collecting centre under the control scheme, but the quality was described as very good. Allocations for bacon purposes absorbed the larger proportion of the animals.

In dead meat, releases at the beginning of the week were rather on a heavier scale, owing to prevailing weather conditions, and more imported was included. At the close, fresh killed was again a smaller pitching, as compared with imported, and the quality was very satisfactory. Pork was in light supply. A limited number of imported pigs was released. It is officially stated that, from Monday next, imported meat will no longer be marked Empire or Foreign. Butchers may mark such meat as imported, and invoices or delivery notes will be treated in the same manner. This change is being made in order to help the butcher who may be unable to ascertain the origin of his supplies of imported meat.

There has been some falling off in arrivals of grouse towards the week-end, but with a good demand prices have been well maintained at 11/- to 15/- for young birds and 5/- to 8/- per brace for old (wholesale); odd lots of leverets have been available at from 2/6 upwards (retail), and supplies of rabbits are expected next week. Dead poultry shows a rather increasing tendency, although still short, and best fowls, chickens and ducks sell steadily at the controlled price of 1/7 per lb. (wholesale). Salmon is only a moderate arrival, but demand continues good, and Irish maintains late rates, best quality quoted 4/6 per lb. (wholesale).

Film Notes

What Price Salvation?

By Our Cinema Correspondent.

MOST people who go to see Shaw's Major Barbara at the Savoy this week will go prepared to compare it with the play and/or the film "Pygmalion," and I think they will find that it compares favourably with both of them.

To be sure there are those who will say that it was not a bit like the play. There are also those who will say that it is not a film; it is merely a play on the screen. Probably they are both right in their way; but that nonsense should not worry the average cinemagoer.

"Major Barbara" is a really good film; better, I should think, than "Pygnalion," but possibly its appeal will not be so universal.

The direction and photography are excellent; to put it into film parlance, Gabriel Pascal has rung the bell again, and the settings—with the exception of Undershaft's factory, which is too ultra-modern and ultra-American for words—are just right. As for the acting, I could give you a list of names as long as this week and next week, but you will find it in any of the "blurbs"; they are all stars and they were all perfectly cast. Wendy Hiller—who plays Barbara with such restrained forcefulness—and Robert Newton—who plays Bill Walker with equally unrestrained forcefulness—deserve very special mention.

The story—well, if you do not know it, why not go and see the film? I propose to see it again during the week several times—and that is recommendation indeed.

Royal

They have been doing things to Judy Canova in Hollywood. She used to be a nice, simple sort of girl, with no nonsense about her, but they are doing their best to turn her into a college glamour girl; in Sis Hopkins they even make her sing a large lump of grand opera à la Deanna Durbin, which, Heaven help her, she does quite well.

All through she does her level best to make something of the film, but what with the director's idea of a good picture, Bob Crosby's idea of good music and Jerry Colonna's idea of good fun, she did not have much of a chance.

There were one or two funny scenes, and Judy Canova sang some crazy songs engagingly, but, on the whole, it was disappointing, especially after "Scatterbrain."

If you like Judy Canova well enough to forgive her for associating with the others, even for business reasons, you will enjoy the film, because she is really too good to be completely submerged.

Personally, I just cannot enjoy a film with Bob Crosby liable to pop onto the screen any moment.

Carlton

I went to the Carlton this week, fully expecting to be amused by The Bank Detective and bored by The Devil's Pipeline. Frankly, I was neither; the latter was as interesting as the former was unfunny.

The less said about "The Bank Detective" the better. I do not like W. C. Fields at the best of times; he is pompous, pedantic, ugly (which he cannot help) and "ham" (which he can). In a film like "David Copperfield," where there is a good plot and hundreds of good actors, one does not notice it so badly; in this picture, where there was nothing else but W. C. Fields, it was really painful to watch him. I did not leave in the middle of the picture actually, but I almost wish I had.

"The Devil's Pipeline," however, atoned for a great deal. It is one of those hearty outdoor adventure stories, about an oil-well which was worked by white slave labour, and the two boys who are sent out to clean it up. The boys are Richard Arlen and Andy Devine, and the "clean-up" was beautifully and spectacularly executed with T.N.T., machine-guns and a kiss for the girl-friend who did not deserve it.

Capitol

If you do not mind your thrills a little coarse, and you find graveyards, dead bodies, lightning and imbeciles irresistible, then you will probably dream about The Devil Commands for weeks. (You will probably dream about it for weeks, anyway.)

It is a nasty piece of work, with that awful man Boris Karloff once more playing the part of a crazy scientist, this time trying to establish contact with his dead wife. This he proceeds to do, surrounded by a hundred and one terrifying electrical gadgets, five dead bodies, one live ditto—although the latter does not remain in statu quo for long—and an imbecile of a servant who looks and acts "King Kong."

Have I seen this picture before, or is all this scientist stuff getting me down? Anyway, if that is the sort of thrill you like, come and get it; it is excellent of its type.

Also on the programme is "Two Roads," a Western.

Jesse James (Corinthian). In a grand technicolour reissue, handsome Tyrone Power makes Jesse James out to be quite a nice fellow after all; not strictly historical perhaps but who cares about that if it makes a good picture?

* * *

The Testament of Dr. Mabuse (Astor). Retained. A Fritz Lang production, highly Germanic, slightly ponderous, but not a little thrilling.

* * *

The Road to Zanzibar (Adelphi). Also retained. Bob Hope, Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour trek all over darkest Africa together. The former two wisecrack at one another, the latter two make love at one another, and the one in the middle sings a bit. Amusing.

* * *

The Son of Monte Cristo (Metropole). Retained for yet another week, which shows that, although the son may not be as great a swordsman as his father, he can rival the latter's box-office attraction.

* * *

Magic in Music (Grafton). Allan Jones and the boys all get together to show us the truth of this saying. I do not doubt there is magic in music; the trouble is, I could not find the music.

* * *

The Golden Fleecing (Astoria). Gangster comedy—more latter than former—with Lloyd Nolan and Lew Ayres. Also, "Colorado," a Western, I shouldn't wonder. From Thursday, "Queen of the Yukon," with Irene Rich wearing the crown and Charles Bickford the trousers. Also, "Up in the Air."

* * *

Romance on the Rio Grande (Theatre de Luxe). Two Cesar Romeros, each one—if possible—twice as offensive as the other. Also "Jennie," with Virginia Gilmour and William Henry. From Thursday, "The Great 'Plane Robbery." Also, Edith Fellows and Rex Evans in "Five Little Red Peppers in Trouble."

* * *

Boom Town (Pavilion). Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy find trouble, oil, and "goils" (Hedy Lamarr and Claudette Colbert) out where the oil wells grow. I forget who is in love with whom, but it's quite interesting.

* * *

Hullaballoo (Regent), with Frank Morgan. Also, "Virginia City," in colour. From Thursday, little Judy Garland in "Little Nellie Kelly," which is twice as popular as it deserves to be.

OBITUARY

MR. JOHN COATES

Mr. John Coates, whose death occurred on Saturday last, at the age of 76, was one of the most popular tenors of his day. He belonged to a well-known Yorkshire musical family, and was educated at Bradford Grammar School. In Ireland he will be remembered for his fine performances in connection with the Carl Rosa, Moody-Manners and Quinlan Opera Companies. In his operatic career he gave dramatic interpretations of the parts with which he was entrusted, and enjoyed a high degree of popularity. His first London appearance was at the Savoy Theatre, and for five years he sang in comic opera and musical comedy as a light baritone. As an exponent of the tenor solos in the oratorios of Sir Edward Elgar, Mr. John Coates ranked with the late Mr. Gervase Elwes. As an operatic singer he toured Germany, South Africa and Australia. Having served in the 1914-18 war, he resumed his profession and started his own recitals. In this way he gave many concert recitals in America and in England. He also took part in some of the Dublin Celebrity Concerts, and gave a recital at Woodbrook, Bray, organised by Sir Stanley Cochrane. He made his first concert appearance when twelve years of age.

DR. WILLIAM KERR

The death took place yesterday, at his residence, Seven Houses, Armagh, of Dr. William Kerr, J.P., after a long illness. He was a native of Clones, and practised in Armagh for almost half-a-century. He is survived by his widow, two sisters and three nephews.

"A DANGER TO THE NATION"

EMIGRATION FROM EIRE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

GALWAY, Saturday.

"TO-DAY there is a kind of latent propaganda against life in the country, for the newspapers, cinema and novel all take it for granted that life in the city is superior. That attitude of mind is a great danger to the prosperity of this country, and should be corrected, especially in the schools, but, unfortunately, the curriculum in national schools does nothing to give the children a proper esteem for the land and to enable them to make the best use of it."

This statement was made by the Bishop of Galway, the Most Rev. Dr. Browne, when he blessed and officially opened a new hall at Labane, Ardrahan, County Galway, built as a memorial to Harry and Patrick Loughnane, brothers, and their sister, Mrs. Quinn. The cost of the hall was defrayed by subscriptions raised by a local committee in this country and America.

His lordship, who was accompanied by the Rev. J. Considine, P.P., inspected a guard of honour of L.D.F., under Group Leader J. Niland, and was presented with an address of welcome from the priests and people of the parish, read by Dr. J. Sexton, M.O.H., Ardrahan. Subsequently Bishop Browne was the guest of honour at a luncheon given at Tullira Castle, the residence of Lord Hemphill.

HOPE FOR NATIONAL CULTURE

In recent years their fair countryside had been disfigured with commercialised dance halls which were mere barns, ugly and hideous, physically as well as morally. Stating that he was glad to hear that the people of the locality were very keen to produce plays and concerts, and that they had the energy and the talents to entertain themselves, his lordship said that nowadays entertainment had become an artificial, passive thing. People sat, as it were, in a trance, mesmerised, watching in the pictures the antics of foreigners. Fortunately, in the country the people must, and could, entertain themselves and so music, song and drama remained in honour. There was still hope for their national culture and it still had vitality and deep roots there. Was it not in that very countryside, he asked, that Edward Martyn, Lady Gregory and Yeats found inspiration and ideas for the literary and dramatic revival with which their names were associated?

It was very necessary in Ireland today that farmers should have a proper esteem for the dignity and solid advantages of their own calling, and should give up the foolish notion that life in the city was superior to theirs. The farmer was an independent man, master of himself and of his time. He had not the terrible dread of insecurity and the constant fear of losing his job and leaving his wife and children penniless. At the worst, the farmer's widow and children would have a roof and enough to eat.

EXTERNAL DANGERS

The country had been invaded by agents of foreign firms, who were trying to get strong young Irishmen to leave the country for work abroad. They promised large wages and all the attractions of city life—and, unfortunately, many were yielding to the lure.

"I am surprised," continued Bishop Browne, "that these people are allowed to operate so freely; for they are a danger to their victims and to the nation. They do not make clear that a large part of the wages must go in quasi-compulsory savings in the form of certificates or income tax, part of which they will get back at the end of the war. They do not tell them of the dangers to body and soul on the other side and of the true conditions of life and work. Those who go across leave their dependents here. They say they will send a few pounds each week to them. We know that story. But, even if they do, what good is paper money if there is no food and fuel to buy, and how will there be food and turf if the producers have left the country? There is very little good in appealing to the country to grow more wheat and cut more turf if this emigration continues."

In England, he continued, employers were not allowed to entice farm workers and miners away from their work, but it was allowed in Ireland. If it went on the dependents of those who had left would have no one to produce for them or defend them. Already the Local Security and Defence Forces were feeling the draught. It should not be necessary for any man to leave his native land as long as there was undeveloped resources and millions of Irish money invested abroad. Recently they were told by a person in high office that the prospect for them was one of scourging, with higher taxation and more regulations.

THE DUTY OF THE GOVERNMENT

It was a grievous matter that there would not be regulations to control the flow of capital and labour from this country, and some plan devised to staunch the wound of emigration by utilising at home these millions of Irish investments, which might be worth very little after the war. The first duty of Irishmen, whether they had capital or labour, was to their own country, and the duty of the Government was to control the movement of both in the interest of the nation. What they needed was not scourging, but healing to stop the flow of blood and staunch the wounds.

Thanking all who subscribed to the cost of the hall, Dr. Browne specially mentioned Mr. Shawe-Taylor, who had given a very large sum in gift and interest-free loan, and also Lady Hemphill. His lordship also paid tribute to the work of Father Considine in carrying the project through.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

without Calomel—and you'll jump out of bed in the morning full of vim and vigour

The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk, and the world looks punk.

Laxatives help a little, but a mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good old Carters Brand Little Liver Pills to get these two pints of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carters Brand Little Liver Pills. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 1/3 and 3/-
